Open Revolt Of Students Fans Unrest In Germany

BigDrop in Foreign Trade Is Revealed

Catholic Youth Leader's Slaying by Police Is Revealed.

Berlin, July 16 (AP).—An open revolt of Goettingen University students, a stanch attack on the Nazi antifraternity movement, and a report of a distinctly adverse trade balance were fresh contributions today to the general discontent in Germany.

At the same time it was revealed that the national leader of a Catholic Youth organization, Adelbert Probst, was killed several days ago "resisting arrest," and a new attack on Jews was inaugurated by Der Angriff, newspaper of Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels.

In the revolt at Goettingen, the first instance of the kind under the Hitler regime, 1,000 fraternity men battled with brown-shirted Nazi students.

The fight broke out after the fraternity men held a meeting at which they protested vigorously the dissolution of the ancient university societies. Fire hose were turned on the combatants and finally order was restored after the arrest of ten leaders.

Difficulties with the Catholics were emphasized by the revelation of Probst's death in a circular issued by the Catholic Youth headquarters in Duesseldorf, and it was regarded as likely that the Vatican will delay any acceptance of the recently agreed-upon interpretation of the concordat.

The situation as regards the Protestant churches remained unchanged as Chancellor Hitler postponed a conference with his Reichsbishop, Ludwig Mueller, without setting a new date.

Mueller has been opposed bitterly by many Protestant clergy, and his meeting with the chancellor had been looked to as important.

The newspaper attack on the Jews served to dash hopes that the policy would be changed as a result of the "purge" of "traitors" in which at least 77 persons were killed.

U. S. Marshal's Aid Dies of Pistol Shot

Thornton's Body Found in Culpeper Fire House.

With a bullet in his head and a pistol beside the body, Philip Thornton, 42, United States deputy marshal at Alexandria, was found dead yesterday in the Culpeper, Va., fire house.

Sergt. Joseph E. Barrows, town policeman, found the body when the fire house was opened. Friends of Thornton could offer no reason why he might have committed suicide, pointing out he was in good health, had no financial difficulties so far as was known and had a good record as deputy marshal.

Thornton visited his family in Culpeper over the week-end, apparently returning to Alexandria late Sunday. Inmates of the jail, near the fire house, said they heard a shot several hours before the body was discovered. Formerly a State policeman, Thornton was appointed deputy marshal about two months ago to succeed William S. Schoeni.

Don Gets 4 Months On Killing Charge

Auto Racer Released on Bail Pending Appeal.

Douglas, Isle of Man, July 16 (AP).—Kaye Don, British motor and boat racer, was sentenced today to four months in prison on a manslaughter charge and then was released on bail pending appeal.

Leaning on a cane, Don was pale as the judge pronounced sentence based on his conviction Saturday of responsibility for the death of his mechanic, Francis Tayler, in an automobile crash May 28 during a test run.

Don and Mrs. Don returned to England to await the appeal, which will come up for hearing within a few weeks.

Kidnap Charge Dropped After Accuser Is Wed

Los Angeles, July 16 (AP).—Kidnaping charges against R. C. "Dapper Danny" Dowling, movie dance director, who married his erstwhile accuser, Marjorie Crawford, flying actress, were dismissed in Superior Court today on motion of the State.

When Dowling came up for arraignment several weeks ago, he disclosed that he had married Miss Crawford since she testified at his preliminary hearing that he forced her to accompany him to Yuma, Ariz., in an attempt to marry her.

Dooling Head Of Tammany; Peace Made

Society Expects Federal Patronage to Recoup Waning Power.

New York, July 16 (AP).—Tammany Hall, leaderless nearly three months and split into angry, warring factions, reunited peacefully today in selecting James J. Dooling as its chieftain. It moved to rebuild its waning power on a foundation of expected Federal patronage.

The election of Dooling, 41-year-old attorney, brought New York County democracy into accord with a National Administration for the first time since the Civil War—for Dooling was tacitly supported by Postmaster General James A. Farley.

This election marked also the complete withdrawal of John F. Curry, deposed former ruler, from the councils of the 150-year-old society. Curry resigned from the executive committee as the meeting opened.

The executive committee heard the formal withdrawal of Stephen

U. S. Refuses To Haggle Over Berlin Interest

In a terse note left at the German foreign office yesterday by Ambassador William E. Dodd, the United States Government refused to bargain over payments of interest due American holders of German bonds and insisted that Berlin make good on its obligations.

The "aide memoire" held, in effect, that since Germany agreed to pay interest due to British holders of certain of its bonds, the government should give America the same treatment without any negotiations or special agreement.

On July 1, Germany declared a moratorium on payment of its foreign obligations, including the Dawes and Young Plan bonds, which have special status because of the intergovernmental support in their flotations. Approximately $600,000,000 in these securities are held by Americans.

Exception Starts Argument.

This action started the argument between the two nations, because Great Britain forced Germany to make an exception and agree to pay interest for at least six months on these bonds.

The United States then demanded equal treatment on grounds that Germany had no right to discriminate.

In Berlin again yesterday Ambassador Dodd told Germany that the United States considers it "an ines-

Heat Fells Three; Ten Degree Drop Is Booked Today

An area of polar air, moving down from the region of the Great Lakes, will bring temperatures 10 degrees lower in the District today the Weather Bureau predicted.

Three persons were overcome by the heat, which attained a maximum of 93.3 degrees at 4 p. m. yesterday. The humidity reading at 8 a. m. yesterday was 67.

Edward Meininger, 12, of the 500 block of Third street northwest, was overcome by the heat after he drank a large quantity of ice water at his home. He was taken to Emergency Hospital, where his condition was described as not serious.

As he waited for a train in the Union Station, Eddie Dewey, 31, colored, of Baltimore, was felled by the heat. He was treated at Emergency Hospital. Robert Berry, 40, colored, of the 3400 block of Oliver street southwest, also was treated for heat prostration at Emergency.

Burns, Bane Appointed to Stocks Board

Massachusetts Judge to Be Exchange Control General Counsel.

F.T.C. Attorney to Act as Executive Aid to Agency.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Judge John J. Burns of the Massachusetts Superior Court yesterday was appointed general counsel to the Federal Securities Exchange Commission, and Baldwin B. Bane was named executive assistant to that agency.

These are the two most important "topside" positions on the staff of the commission, which is gradually completing its organization in order to be able to assume jurisdiction over the stock exchanges of the country on September 1.

Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, who announced the two appointments, also revealed that Prof. William O. Douglas, of the Yale Law School, had agreed to serve as chief of the commission's corporate reorganization division.

Prof. Douglas, Mr. Kennedy said, would be in direct charge of the investigation into corporate reorganizations and the activities of protective committees which Congress in the stock market control act directed the commission to make and report on, with recommendations for regulatory legislation. This is regarded as an important phase of the commission's work.

Burns High in Profession.

In selecting Judge Burns for the post of general counsel, the most important on the staff, the commission obtained a vigorous young man who already has earned a high place in his profession. He was the youngest judge ever to sit on the Massachusetts Superior Court, a life appointment, which he is resigning effective September 15.

Judge Burns, however, is now on vacation from his judicial post and is scheduled to start work with the commission on August 1. His first duty will be to interpret for the commission its authority and duty under the stock market control act. He will sit at the commission's right hand in the drafting of regulations for the control of exchanges.

Two-Year Hunt In Killing Ends

A two-year hunt for an alleged murderer, who led District detectives through 11 States, ended yesterday when word came from Point Pleasant, W. Va., that Detective Sergt. Jerry Flaherty cornered Harrison McKinley Kaiser.

Kaiser already had been indicted on a charge of first degree murder in the shooting of James F. Morgan, secretary of the machinists' union local at the Navy Yard. Morgan was shot before the eyes of his daughter as he left his home, 3629 Jocelyn street northwest, to attend a meeting of the local, September 30, 1932.

He fell, mumbling "Kaiser did it." A search was immediately instituted for the latter, who had recently been discharged from a machinist's job at the yard. The accused man fled, the chase leading detectives upon an almost Nation-wide search. In Phoenix, Ariz., his pursuers once were within 2 minutes of capturing him.

Kaiser is 38 years old. In Washington, he lived in the 1400 block of L street southeast. He is said to have a wife now living in Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

Dillinger "Seen Again."

Tipton, Iowa, July 16 (U.P.).—The latest "I saw Dillinger" story comes from Sheriff W. W. Christian who says an unnamed farmer reported that he saw the Indiana outlaw in a pasture "sitting on the ground eating a box lunch." The farmer said identification was positive.

City in Grip of General Strike

1,300,000 Face Famine Threat in General Walkout.

Car Service Halts; Autos Abandoned

Johnson Flies to Scene; Strife Threatened in Portland.

San Francisco, July 16 (AP).—The normal processes of existence for 1,300,000 men, women and children were torn up by the roots today in the relentless clutch of a general strike in the San Francisco metropolitan district.

National Guardsmen by the thousand, with tanks, field pieces, machine guns and other formidable engines of death surged into befuddled San Francisco and others were on their way.

Police forces were swelled throughout the area by emergency additions. A great community had been knocked off its balance by the shock of business stagnation and fearful consequences loomed in the face of its shakiness.

The city buzzed with rumors that regular Army forces were ready to move in, but there was no confirmation.

Mobs Loot Stores.

Mobs looted a few grocery stores still running in the face of a food shortage and a buying stampede.

By the tens of thousands the populace began surging into the streets. Mostly they were the curious. Others perhaps had less friendly motives. Virtually all were pedestrians. Some private automobiles were running.

Everywhere there was tenseness and uncertainty.

City, State and Federal authorities as well as leaders of the general strike promised food for everybody, but it was not in evidence.

Strikers were reported picketing against supply trucks waiting an opportunity to enter the city, under National Guard or State police convoy.

Khaki-clad militiamen began mounting machine guns on the roofs of commission houses in the produce district.

By noon there were 4,600 guardsmen in the city and 1,500 others on the way.

Disorders Widespread.

Special policemen walked the streets of Oakland and other East Bay cities, trying to stop sporadic disorders.

Talk of a general strike in Portland began to spread once more. Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, was heading toward San Francisco from the Oregon city in an Army bombing plane.

Figures were lacking, but observers estimated San Francisco's full union labor strength of 65,000, exclusive of a few workers who remained for emergency duty in vital jobs, were on strike. The strike was effective at 8 o'clock this morning.

In the East Bay cities of Oakland, Alameda and other adjacent communities, thousands were strike already, but the general walkout there was slated to start tomorrow morning.

Long before the general strike actually started the wheels of commerce stopped in San Francisco and slowed in the neighboring cities.

No Fresh Food.

San Francisco residents began to learn how much they had taken for granted. There was no fresh meat, no fresh vegetables. No street cars. No taxicabs. No laundry. No barber shops operating. No ice deliveries except for emergency.

Liquor stores remained open, but they were due for a jolt from the strikers. Headquarters of the International Longshoremen's Association, whose walkout in Pacific Coast ports last May 9 began the trouble, announced it had formed a committee to visit San Francisco liquor stores and "request" them to stop sales.

The union said this was necessary because young people were being freely supplied with intoxicants.

"Self discipline" was made a cardinal point in the program of the striking thousands. A strikers' police force was organized to preserve order among the union men and individuals were threatened with disciplinary action by their fellows for any acts of violence.

Despite the peace avowals of strikers, the militiamen streaked into San Francisco in mounting force.

Troops Hold Waterfront.

Two thousand militiamen were already in the city, holding the State-owned waterfront in a war-like grip since July 5, when bloody fighting between police and strikers brought the long strike to a crisis.

28 Park Bank Directors Sued For $2,000,000

Huge Losses Attributable to Their Negligence, Receiver Says.

Twenty-eight directors of the closed Park Savings Bank were named defendants in a suit filed by John F. Moran, receiver, in the District Supreme Court yesterday, in an effort to recoup the huge losses suffered by the bank.

Charging the directors with ten acts which involved "nonperformance of, the misfeasance in the performance of, and the malfeasance of duties imposed by law," the action listed liabilities of $2,595,991.60, which it alleged were traceable to the directors.

The Park Savings Bank was closed March 4, 1933, with then existing liabilities of $3,973,107.39. It was never permitted to reopen, and after a grand jury investigation three men were indicted although a major portion of the losses was placed on the doorstep of Robert S. Stunz, executive officer and a director, who committed suicide.

The itemized list of claims against the directors charges that there was a loss of $112,000 through "thefts by Robert S. Stunz of customers' notes left for collection;" a loss of $144,351.87 "consisting of money wrongfully advanced by the bank, and irregular credits to the accounts of and on notes for and on behalf of Benedict M. McNeil, Alexander McNeil and John McNeil, and $7,853.34 consisting of a bad loan and irregular credits of principal and interest on a note executed by Fanny Cunningham and indorsed by Alexander McNeil."

Another item, a loss of $100,000,

Greater Love Hath No Turkey Gobbler For Its Offspring

Staunton, Va., July 16 (AP).—Mrs. James Marshall, of Fauquier County, believes that a turkey gobbler on her place should take its place among the heroes.

When the hen turkey died, leaving a brood of ten chicks, the gobbler adopted them and took them abroad every day searching for food. Trapped one day in a downpour, the gobbler, Mrs. Marshall relates, gathered the chicks under its wings to protect them.

After the storm they were found, the gobbler dead and the chicks alive and dry still under its wings. It had been drowned by the beating rain.

Prison Serenade Brings Curses.

New York, July 16 (U.P.).—The dreary melody of "The Prisoner's Song," played by a German band under a window of the Tombs set prisoners yelling and cursing. Police learned a practical joker had hired the band for $1.50.

Kuehling Slew Woman And Self, Prober Holds

Miami, Fla., July 16 (AP).—An official report, stating he believed the deaths of Roy H. Kuehling, 42, of Washington, and Mrs. E. F. Faircloth, 52, were caused by murder and suicide, was made here today by Peace Justice Henry L. Oppenborn.

Bodies of the victims were found near a causeway early Saturday. A previous report by County Physician E. C. Thomas stated the couple drowned.

Dr. Thomas' report was made after State Investigator J. B. Rowland and other authorities agreed on a theory that Kuehling, an unemployed real estate salesman, and Mrs. Faircloth drank heavily, went to sleep near the causeway and were drowned by an incoming tide.

Prior to the finding of their bodies, Kuehling and Mrs. Faircloth had not been seen since Thursday evening.

Before filing his report with E. B. Leatherman, clerk of the Circuit Court, Peace Justice Oppenborn said he would await completion of any anaysis of liquor found in Kuehling's automobile, parked near where the bodies were found.

Oppenborn said there was little doubt in his mind that Kuehling killed Mrs. Faircloth, either by poison or by drowning, or both, and then took his own life.

Rowland and L. O. Scarboro, chief of city detectives, declared, however, that the case is closed as far as they are concerned.

Oppenborn said he talked with a woman at whose home Kuehling roomed last winter, and quoted her as saying that Kuehling came to her home Thursday afternoon, shortly before the couple disappeared, and talked of suicide.

The peace justice said Mrs. Faircloth accompanied Kuehling to the former landlady's home, but waited for him in an automobile outside. Kuehling asked his former landlady, Oppenborn said, to lend him some money.

Oppenborn quoted the former landlady as saying Kuehling told her:

"I am down and out and I love this woman. She is married and I can't have her. The only thing I can see to do is to end it all."

Mrs. Faircloth's husband, E. Frank Faircloth, with whom she had not lived recently, arrived here yesterday from Quincy, Fla., and conferred with authorities about the case.

Nats Defeat Tigers, 10-8

Three Homers in Sixth and Five Runs in Seventh Provide Margin.

By Lewis F. Atchison
(Post Staff Correspondent).

Detroit, July 16.—The mischievous Nats went out for big game this afternoon and scored a 10-to-8 victory over Mickey Cochrane's Tiger managerie, reducing Detroit's lead over New York to a mere percentage point or two.

Three home runs in the sixth inning, delivered by Kress, Sewell and Schulte and good for four runs, put Washington back in the running after the home team assumed a 2-1 lead. Five markers in the succeeding frame won the ball game.

Greenberg Hits Homer.

Hank Greenberg also socked a homer for the Tigers, but it came too early in the ninth inning to do his side any real good. The Tigers got the tying runs on base after Hank's prodigious wallop, but old "Life Begins at Forty" McColl fanned Punch Hitter Schuble and forced Fox to roll to Kress for the final out.

McColl was the third Washington pitcher to face the pennant-aspiring Detroiters. Al Crowder started and Bob Burke followed him. Crowder survived until the sixth when he expired as quickly as a yawn with four runs over and Owen reposing on second and none out. Burke was thumbed into the showers in the seventh after generously putting three opponents on base with two down.

The Nats had a quick look at Hamlin, Auker, Marberry and Sorrell. Though wild from the very

Senator Fletcher Rests At Va. Health Resort

Senator Duncan U. Fletcher, of Florida, veteran chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, yesterday was at Craig Healing Springs, Va., for "a complete rest," on advice of physicians.

Senator Fletcher, who had been in poor health recently, made the trip to the Virginia resort last Saturday, it was learned.

Lumber Prices Cut to Hasten Housing Work

Saving of 15 Per Cent to Consumer Approved by NRA.

In an effort to get the Administration's gigantic housing program under way immediately, the National Recovery Administration announced last night approval of a reduction of from 8 to 10 per cent in the price of lumber ordinarily used in house construction.

The cut was estimated to mean approximately 15 per cent saving to consumers renovating or building under the housing program.

The reductions were made by the lumber and timber products code authority and approved by Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson.

At the same time, the Recovery Administration announced that one of its immediate objectives is the development of a unified policy program for applying Blue Eagle principles to industry.

This action, it was pointed out, is a forerunner of other announcements by the NRA in "revealing step by step its general policy so

Paris-Berlin Accord On Trade Is Reported

Berlin, July 16 (AP).—An agreement with France on general principles of Franco-German trade was announced semiofficially today as having been reached over the week-end.

The announcement said the state of negotiations justified the expectation of a mutually satisfactory accord between France and Germany which would include the question of servicing the Dawes and Young loans.

Winks, White House Prankster, Buried Beside Longworth Dog

Winks, President Roosevelt's pet Llewellyn setter and the Nation's No. 1 dog, lay in a special pine coffin in Rosedale Dogs' Cemetery, Silver Spring, Md., last night, not far from the grave of Manchu, Manchurian spaniel presented Mrs. Nicholas Longworth by the Dowager Empress of China when the "Princess Alice" visited the Orient.

Only Dr. David E. Buckingham, White House veterinarian, and Meggie, Mrs. Roosevelt's 10-year-old dog, which she gave Dr. Buckingham after Meggie had bitten the Dall children, "Buzzie" and "Sistie," attended the funeral.

"She seemed to sense the occasion was tragic," said Dr. Buckingham yesterday. "I can't say she tried to whine, but there was a certain solemnity about her, although she really didn't know Winks personally. You see, she might well have been jealous, for Winks replaced her at the White House after she misbehaved."

News of Winks' death was wirelessed President Roosevelt on his Pacific cruise, Secretary Marvin McIntyre announced yesterday.

Winks died Sunday, virtually committing suicide.

He was racing around the White House Grounds with Pal, bull terrier of Gus Gemmerich, President Roosevelt's bodyguard. Suddenly he crashed headlong into an iron fence and died from brain concussion.

A favorite of the President, whose bed he visited frequently in the morning, Winks first came to public attention last February when he went to the servants' quarters and devoured 19 breakfasts of ham and eggs on the table. The prank greatly amused Mr. Roosevelt.

Packed House Greets Return Of Maude Adams, 62, to Stage

Ogunquit, Me., July 16 (AP).—Maude Adams, at 62, tonight returned to the stage for a tour of "one-nighters" as Maria in Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night."

A tiny playhouse at this seashore resort with an audience containing many of her devotees of years past was the scene of the famous star's "debut." Likewise gathered were the Nation's leading critics, who saw a production that tossed precedent to the winds. The house was a sell-out.

Winner of international fame in the name part of "Peter Pan," after catching the public eye in "The Little Minister" in 1897, Miss Adams chose to subordinate herself in the role of the aged Maria. This served, however, as a vehicle for the Adams genius so familiar to theatergoers of a generation now passed.

Maria Adels, New York actress, as Viola, played the leading role. The portrayal of Maria by Miss Adams offered an opportunity for a heightening of the comedy and supported the star's belief that it provided a challenge with as many compensations as the heavier characterizations.

The return of Miss Adams came after weeks of private rehearsal, during which novelties of the production were kept from the public. She preferred to make her bow again in the comparative dimness of the summer theater rather than the brilliancy of Broadway.

A six-day engagement here will be followed by one-night performances in Camden, Orono, Bar Harbor, Brunswick and Lewiston, after which the company will go into New Hampshire, Vermont and Massachusetts.

100 miles southward, and rolled to San Francisco. The 160th Infantry, another National Guard unit, was suddenly mobilized in Los Angeles and moved to the bay area by train.

Other guardsmen were deploying through the rich agricultural valleys south of the city, preparing to guard advancing truck trains of supplies for the suddenly food-conscious community. Three-inch guns were reported set up at strategic points.

Five hundred special police and 25 extra "prowler cars" were commissioned in San Francisco to augment the regular force of 1,300 officers.

Mayor Rossi mobilized a committee of 500 prominent individuals to engineer the dsitribution of necessities.

A committee of strikers likewise made plans to feed the populace by establishing depots to sell all fresh provisions except meat.

19 Restaurants Packed.

By labor's decree, 19 of San Francisco's 2,000 restaurants were allowed to operate and were supplied by union effort. Patrons packed these places to the walls. Many customers entered only to buy food, and returned into the streets to eat.

All theaters were dark. Radio programs were curtailed because the union musicians were out.

Gasoline was almost priceless. City police, fire and health departments, hospitals and physicians were served with motor fuel and oil from a central station municipally operated.

San Francisco still had gas and electricity, milk and bakery supplies and garbage disposal service, the unions having permitted this.

The trans-bay ferries of the Southern Pacific Railroad continued to operate, although the smaller Key System boats were strikebound. Bay traffic thus was kept fairly open.

San Francisco newspaper continued to publish, having just signed new contracts with the typographical union. The papers were gaunt from a lack of display advertising, but they were seized eagerly by street throngs.

Stockton Asks Troops.

National Guard troops to protect the waterfront at Stockton, 40 miles from San Francisco, were asked of Gov. Frank F. Merriam by Mayor Con J. Franke. The mayor said large cargoes of commodities were piling up there because of the strike.

The outstanding violence of the morning in San Francisco was the mob assault of about 1,000 men on a grocery at Twenty-third and Mission streets. They ransacked the place.

At Hayward, south of Oaland, 50 men raided an alleged Communist hangout, dismantled the place and burned the furniture.

Pickets accosted pedestrians and warned them not to go to work. Six asserted Communists booed Mayor Rossi at the San Francisco Hall of Justice and were seized by Chief of Police William J. Quinn.

Creosote bombs were hurled through the windows of stores and homes in Oakland. Numerous trucks bearing food were oevrturned. Service station operators were threatened. Rocks were hurled through windows.

Oakland butcher shops closed, but the Bay Cities Vegetable Growers Association announced an agreement with strikers permitting grocers to stock up with fruit and vegetables tomorrow. The gasoline situation was acute there and most of the street cars—operated by the key system—were at a standstill. Express lines of the Southern Pacific continued to run.

The East Bay City authorities announced they would ask for militia only in an extremity.

Other Cities Augment Police.

Besides the 350 regular police in Oakland, 100 special officers were added. Berkeley, the university city which boasts of scientific bluecoats and patrolment with college degrees doubled its normal force of 30. One of the first moves of the augmented force was to raid a communist headquarters.

Besides reports of Army alertness, Navy and relief authorities in Washington evidenced a readiness to act in eventualities.

Senator Wagner, of New York, head of the old NRA Labor Board, was reported to have left the National Capital for Porotland to act as mediator in the longshoremen's strike.

At the request of the President's National Longshoremen's Board here, which failed ot persuade opposing sides to arbitrate the original strike, the new National Labor Relations Board in Washington detailed its chief examiner, P. A. Donaghue, to head for San Francisco by airplane to assist in negotiations.

Gov. Merriam, avowedly determined to compel obdeience to law in the strike-harried district, arranged to make a Nation-wide radio address tonight.

Paralysis Spreads Over San Francisco

Closed Shop Demand Is Issue That Brought General Strike

Longshoremen First Asked 30-Hour Week; Raise; 8 Dead in Riots.

San Francisco, July 16 (AP).—Since May 9, when 12,000 longshoremen quit work, demanding a 30-hour week, better conditions, and $1 an hour instead of 85 cents, the coastwide maritime strike has written into industrial history a record of bitterness, blood and death, financial losses in the millions and finally the general strike in the bay cities.

For many months trouble had rumbled along the waterfronts. The strike previously had been set for March 23, ut an eleventh-hour appeal from President Roosevelt had resulted in postponement.

A mediation board was promptly appointed by the President, with Dr. Henry C. Grady, of San Francisco, as chairman, and C. A. Reynolds, of Seattle, and J. L. Leonard, of Los Angeles, as members. Session after session with opposing employer-labor factions resulted in apparent settlement on April 3, but this was dashed on the rocks on a wage dispute and deadlock over control of hiring halls.

Shippers Announce Strike.

Police were ordered to the waterfronts by the hundreds and soon were on the jump with outcroppings of minor violence.

On May 15 occurred the first major riot—at Los Angeles, when 2,000 strikers advanced on a housing hall where some 400 nonunion workers were sheltered. Dick Parker, 20, who had joined the International Longshoremen's Association the day before, and John Knudsen were killed and 64 others injured, as fists, stones, clubs and bullets flew.

The strike began to spread rapidly, goods piled higher and higher at the docks. The dock checkers quit, 7,000 seaman walked out and within a few days strikers were estimated to number 27,000, including marine engineers, cooks, stewards, water tenders, and the master mates and pilots.

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins dispatched Assistant Secretary Edward McGrady to the Coast, to join the mediation board's attempts at settlement.

Control of the hiring halls, or the "closed shop" issue, continued the stumbling block. Shippers insisted upon the right to hire whom they chose, and to give steady employment to work gangs they knew and regarded as permanent employes. The union demanded control of the hiring agencies.

More and more ships were harbor-bound. At one time 170 were in San Francisco Harbor alone. A shipment of Panama hats rocked gently in bay waters, while the summer wore on. Fireworks from the Orient came to port and stayed—while July 4 came and went. Staple food supplies grew low in Hawaii, vacation cruises were canceled, gasoline became scarce in Portland; Cordova, Alaska, went without fresh vegetables and fruits.

Alaskan Blockade Acute.

The blockade to Alaska became critical, since the season is short there to get in necessities demanded for the winter. A separate truce was arranged in Seattle to move cargoes to Alaska, but it was short-lived when Mayor Charles L. Smith, taking personal charge of police June 4 because of the strike emergency, ordered bluecoats to guard nonunion workers at the docks. Strikers declared that act abrogated the agreement.

Mayor Angelo J. Rossi, of San Francisco, had his turn as arbiter. On June 16, after days of almost constant conferences, a settlement seemed certain when a compromise plan, subject to union membership ratification, was signed by employers, business interests, William J. Lewis, district president of the I. L. A., and the association's chief, Joseph P. Ryan.

The I. L. A. was recognized as the agency through which to do collective bargaining, employers promised no discrimination against strikers, but the hiring halls were to be jointly controlled.

Workers Reject It.

Next day the longshoremen membership rejected it, at all ports except San Pedro. It made no provision for grievances of other maritime unions, they complained, and it did not promise the "closed shop."

A joint strike committee of 50 was designated to represent all the unions involved. Harry Bridges, its secretary, held out for the "closed shop" principle. The Chamber of Commerce charged radical elements were leading the strike, and the I. L. A. retorted the "red scare" was employers' propaganda.

Business interests at the various ports sought to "open" them by hiring workers and asking police protection. The San Francisco Industrial Association set several "deadlines" when the port was to be opened, and postponed them as President Roosevelt acted again, appointing a national longshoreman's board to act as arbiter under the new labor disputes act.

On it were Archbishop Edward J. Hanna, McGrady, who had returned again from Washington, and O. K. Cushing, prominent lawyer. The board for a time made progress, but again seemed blocked.

Rioters Return Gas Bombs.

On July 3, the Industrial Association hired workers to man five trucks under heavy police guard, drove them out of the piers and carried goods to a warehouse. The move was the signal for a dozen riots. Police threw tear-gas bombs at the rebellious strikers, who tossed them back. Twenty-six were injured.

On July 5 two men were shot to death, 32 others suffered bullet wounds and dozens of others had cracked heads and broken bones as police attacked advancing pickets.

That night the National Guard, ordered out by Acting Gov. Frank F. Merriam, moved to the waterfront 2,000 strong, while the anger of labor groups flared high over the police shooting.

Deaths of the strike number eight at all coast ports.

Threats of a general strike grew from a mutter to a roar and the movement appeared to gather momentum as the President's board heard informal testimony by both the strikers and employers and worked doggedly to achieve a truce. The board failed. San Francisco labor voted a general strike and the unions of Oakland, Alameda and other East Bay cities fell in line.

22,000 More Quit Alabama Plants Today

30-Hour Week, Pay Raise Demanded; Operators Hint Closing.

Birmington, Ala., July 16 (AP).—Twenty-two thousand textile workers, more than two-thirds of those employed in Alabama's 50 cotton mills, are scheduled to go on strike tomorrow morning demanding a permanent 30-hour week, pay increases and changed working conditions.

No violence was expected, mill operators intimating their intention of closing their plants completely for indefinite periods.

John Dean, international organizer of the United Textile Workers of America, went to Huntsville, Ala., tonight to establish strike headquarters.

Decision to strike, made by local organizations at the various mills, was ratified at an executive session of delegates yesterday and the Alabama State textile council was given authority to fix a date for the walkout.

One union official, who asked that his name be withheld, expressed the opinion today that several locals would not walk out tomorrow.

Workers at cotton mills at Gadsden and Albertville numbering 22,000 went on strike last week after accusing their employers of discharging workers for union activity.

Demands of the strikers include a permanent 30-hour week, a $12 weekly minimum scale, elimination of the "stretchout" system by which the number of looms per employe is increased, reinstatement of jobs eliminated by the "stretchout" system, reemployment of workers discharged for union activity and recognition of the United Textile Workers of America for collective bargaining under the NRA.

Knox Attacks NRA as Trend To Monopolies

Chicago Publisher Asserts Program Step Toward Socialist State.

Chicago, July 16 (AP).—Col. Frank Knox, publisher of the Chicago Daily News, in a radio address tonight said that huge monopolies are being fostered deliberately by some men in Washington as a step toward a socialized State.

Knox, speaking on "Roosevelt versus Roosevelt," appealed "from the New Deal of Franklin Roosevelt to the square deal of Theodore Roosevelt" and called upon "all true progressives to renew the battle against monopoly, even when it is paraded under the plausible banner of a few economic order."

"I say to you in all soberness that there are those in Washington today who deliberately foster the growth of great combinations, so that when the inevitable smash comes and the people rebel—as they will rebel—they may readily convert such huge combinations into Government-operated units and achieve that which they seek—a socialized State," he said.

Predicts Nation Will Rebel.

"When the people understand what is proposed under the new economic order, the sober common sense of the American people, which has never yet failed in a crisis, will rescue us from the doubtless well-intended but fearfully mistaken purposes of the New Deal."

One of the domestic evils which brought on disaster to the economic system was the swift and unprecedented growth of huge business units, Knox said. These were permitted to grow until they became unwieldly and inefficient. They gobbled up the smaller and more efficient competitor to throttle competition and passed the cost along to the consuming public in the form of higher prices.

"A competitive system which permitted such practices was inevitably destined to collapse," he said. "It served to destroy the underlying principle of competition, which was essential to the successful operation of the system.

Friend of Monopoly.

"What has the present Administration done to meet this evil?

"Instead of freeing competition and cleansing the system, it has, through its National Recovery Administration, gone into partnership with every great combination in the country, put the whole power of the Administration behind a price structure that would make the most inefficient unit in the industry profitable.

"This is precisely what has happened in the planned economies of Europe. It is in process of achievement here and now. Those of us who have dared to criticise this sweeping change in our economic system, who have sought to point out the perils of such a course, have all alike been denounced as Tories, diehard Conservatives and blind Reactionaries.

"That is what Gen. Johnson called me when I insisted I would sign no newspaper code which did not include a specific guarantee against any infringement of the freedom of the press. And now Gen. Johnson says he understands better in the light of what transpired in Germany why such a restatement was necessary.

Individual Rights in Peril.

"Thirty years ago I was fighting against the perils of the American system of great combination of capital and industry under another Roosevelt. I even followed him out of the Republican party in 1912 in support of the same intelligent, progressive program. I have no need to change my convictions."

The inspiration for the new order, Knox declared, comes in part at least from the planned economies as practiced in Germany, Italy, Russia and Austria.

"In every instance in the four countries where the new order obtains, individual rights have been utterly and completely destroyed," Knox said.

Midshipmen Received, Pope Praises Sailors

Vatican City, July 16 (AP).—Pope Pius today lauded both "the strength and spirit of the sea and sailors" in receiving a contingent of 300 midshipmen, accompanied by 25 officers of the United States training fleet now in Italian waters.

The pontiff blessed the officers, the midshipmen, their shipmates, and the battleships Arkansas and Wyoming which comprise the training squadron.

500,000 Wait Strike Siege In Minneapolis

Walkout Plans Go Ahead Despite Peace Parley With Truckers.

Minneapolis, July 16 (AP).—Half a million Minneapolis citizens, recalling the violence and hardships caused last May by one truck drivers' strike, faced another at midnight.

Union officials, who led 4,000 workers in the 11-day walkout which caused shortages of foodstuffs and rioting which resulted in two deaths, laid plans for picketing.

Apparently they had little expectation an agreement to avert the strike would come out of conferences of employers and workers' representatives directed by E. H. Dunnigan, Federal negotiator, and Gov. Floyd B. Olson.

Vincent Dunne, union organizer, announced that trucks carrying milk, newspapers, gasoline and farm products would be excepted from picketing. Hotels, restaurants, householders and grocers laid in supplies for a siege.

The walkout was voted after union heads charged employers were flaunting the agreement which ended the May strike. Principal demands are wage increases and that the Truck Drivers Union, an American Federation of Labor affiliate, be permitted to include among its members all workers at plants employing truck drivers.

Employers contend the union should be confined to truck drivers and those who help load and unload trucks.

Today's conference, called to discuss a secret proposal by Dunnigan and Olson, continued through the noon hour without a stop for lunch. Dunnigan, who said he saw a "ray of hope," declared the conferences would be carried on without a break until every possible means to avert the strike had been exhausted.

Food Lack Denied By U. S. Investigators

A report from agents of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration in the San Francisco area revealed there is no food shortage, Aubrey Williams, acting administrator, said last night. He said:

"I have had our agents make a survey of food supplies in the San Francisco area and they report there is no shortage. Distributing points supplying the city have adequate stocks and they are moving in normal commercial channels.

"Numerous inquiries as to whether the Federal Emergency Relief Administration or the Federal Surplus Relief Corporation would supply food inspired the check-up.

"Reports of our representatives in San Francisco reveal no present need for such action by either the FERA or the FSRC. There seems to be no ground for the rumors that the lack of food requires the Federal Government to use its facilities to supplant the usual means of obtaining it.

"We are in constant touch with San Francisco and the other troubled areas by telegraph and telephone."

Judge Burns, of New England, Counsel for Exchange Board

issuance of securities and the general conduct of that business.

Perhaps Judge Burns' most important duty will be to defend the validity of the act creating the commission, if it is attacked in the courts. Lawyers for the New York Stock Exchange contended while the legislation was pending before Congress that it would be an unConstitutional infringement of the rights of exchanges and issuing corporations doing an intrastate business.

The New York Stock Exchange officers indicated that they had no intention of attacking the validity of the legislation but they refused to speak for their membership or for other exchanges in the country. A test of the law's validity, however, can not be obtained until the commission isues its regulations and attempts to enforce them.

Bane Executive Officer.

Mr. Bane, who will be the executive officer of the commission, charged with the duty of coordinating the work, for the last year has been the chief of the securities division of the Federal Trade Commission, in chrage of the administration of the 1933 securities act. He was under consideration also for general counsel.

A graduate of Washington and Lee University, Mr. Bane practiced law at Bedford, Va., serving as a captain of infantry in France during the World War. He joined the staff of the Trade Commission in 1922 as a special attorney and worked in the commission's legal division until he was made chief of the securities division in June, 1933. He is a brother of Frank Bane, former Virginia relief director.

The commission has yet to select an economist, a chief of stock exchange division, a chief of the registration division, perhaps a chief of a securities division. When these "topside" positions, as Mr. Kennedy terms them, are filled, the commission will be ready to start formulating regulations.

Transfer Plans Pushed.

In another two or three weeks the commission expects to be able to move into its quarters in the Interstate Commerce Commission Building at Pennsylvania avenue and Eighteenth street.

Meanwhile, preparations are going ahead for the transfer of the administration of the 1933 securities act to the new commission, which will take place the first week in September. This division is preparing a tabulation of June security flotations, which is said to show only a slight increase over the result for May, due, chiefly, to one large issue.

This was regarded as interesting, because the modification of the 1933 securities act lightening civil damages was expected in some quarters to stimulate new flotations. June, however, can hardly be used as a test in this respect, it was pointed out, because the modifications in the act did not become effective until July 1.

Since the passage of the stock market control act, which carried the amendments to the securities act as a rider, security circles have been in a state of uncertainty which, it is pointed out, will not be relieved until the new commission formulates its regulations and traders will know what will be permitted and what forbidden.

Ryan Is Named To Post on NRA Appeals Board

Successor to Darrow Unit Will Open Offices August 1.

Mgr. John Augustine Ryan, professor of social ethics at Catholic University since 1921, yesterday was appointed to the remaining vacancy on NRA's new Industrial Appeals Board, which will receive complaints on code operations.

Other members named last week by Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson, are Amos J. Peaslee, New York attorney, chairman, and John S. Clement, Philadelphia manufacturer. The new board wil open temporary offices August 1 in the Commerce Building.

Obviously designed to fill the gap recently left by dissolution of the independent Darrow Review Board, the new agency differs in that it will be set up within the Recovery Administration, under the direction of the administrator alone.

An NRA announcement said that it will serve as a forum for all complaints, "particularly complaints of small businesses that the codes oppress or discriminate aganist them or favor monopolies." Such has been the contention of numerous critics, including Clarence Darrow and Senator Borah.

"The new board," it was said, "will have no direct connection with industry, but its appellate character will follow within the administrative setup of the NRA, thus in a sense combining quasi-judicial processes such as those of the Federal Trade Commission with those of the recently abolished National Compliance Board. • • •

"In cases of complaints by small businesses, the new appeals board may recommend the granting of relief by exemptions, exceptions or modifications of codes and the board will be adequately equipped to insure prompt disposition of complaints referred to it."

Receiving his D. D. degree from Catholic University in 1906, Mgr. Ryan has served as professor of moral theology at St. Thomas, professor of political science at Trinity College, connected with Catholic University, and is director of the social action department of the National Catholic Welfare Council. He also is author of several books.

New Wheat Parley Scheduled in August

London, July 16 (AP).—In an effort to salvage something from the now abandoned 1933-34 wheat export agreement, the International Wheat Advisory Commission today announced a conference will begin in London on August 15 to consider export quotas and production limitation during the coming year.

The announcement, signed by Ambassador Robert W. Bingham as chairman, takes cognizance officially for the first time of the fact that Argentina violate thde old export agreement, but Argentine participation is assured in the new conference.

Plan for Fall Naval Parley Eases Tension

Davis Will Sail for U. S. Thursday; Japanese Position in Doubt.

London, July 16 (AP).—Indications that a preliminary naval conference may be held at Geneva in September clarified somewhat the situation today, despite the lack of visible concrete results from the bi-lateral conversations which have been going on here.

Norman H. Davis, United States Ambassador at Large, who has been engaged in the talks here preparatory to the 1935 conference, decided to sail for home Thursday, canceling reservations he had made previously for July 31.

He plans to return to Geneva in the fall to participate in conversations there, again heading the American disarmament delegation when the steering committee of the general conference meets.

May Pave Way for 1935.

The possibility that a naval conference then to pave the way for next year's parley was discussed by various diplomats here.

Considerable confusion still exists as to the position of Japan and Italy, but optimism in varying degrees is found in expressions of those in touch with the situation.

The British believe that some progress has been made toward a new limitation treaty, and plans were made as the discussions ended to take them up again in October, in event, of course, there is no general conference the previous month in Geneva.

The Anglo-French discussions during recent weeks brought out that France is unwilling to participate in the conference unless Italy backs down on its plans to construct two new battleships.

British Plans Featured.

The outlining of Britain's plans for a bigger navy if negotiations failed was the outstanding development from the Anglo-American talks so far as the public was advised.

There has been considerable mystification over the Japanese position. The Japanese, while keeping i ntouch with British talks with the Americans and French, have never initiated their bi-lateral discussions or even set a date for them.

Japan is understood to be waiting until the end of the October conference to denounce the Washington treaty providing for a 5-5-3 ratio with Britain and the United States.

The American decision to leave this week came after the British expressed willingness to postpone the rest of the conversations.

Nippon Navy Heads Map Future Policy

Tokyo, July 16 (AP).—An official conference which may have a bearing on the future naval policy of Japan, was held today by 15 of the navy's highest officers, presided over by Imperial Prince Admiral Hiroyasu Fushimi, chief of the naval general staff.

The results of the conference, looked upon as an aftermath of the government's indecision concerning its program for the 1935 international parley, were not revealed, although newspapers said fundamental policies were decided.

Navy men have been pressing the government to take a firm stand next year and many were reported to be dissatisfied with the appointment of Admiral Keisuki Okada, regarded as a moderate, to the post of premier.

Lumber Prices Cut to Hasten Housing Work

Saving of 15 Per Cent to Consumer Approved by NRA.

that interested parties and the organization itself may know and work toward NRA aims."

The lumber price reduction was hailed by observers to mean the lifting of that industry out of a stage of stagnation in which it has been deeply rooted for more than a month. It was explained in lumber circles that this was due to a report that a price reduction program would be placed into effect.

An NRA statement explained that an earlier reduction order approved by Administrator Johnson several days ago for retail lumber dealers of ½ to 8½ per cent would bring about, together with the order of yesterday, 14 to 15 per cent reductions in the prices to consumers.

"The reduction announced," the recovery administration said, "were made in accordance with the previously expressed pledge of the industry to cooperate to the fullest extent in the President's housing program.

"The new schedules, although primarily intended to stimulate house construction or modernization, will also include prices reductions in grades and sizes for items used for other purposes such as, for example, the manufacture of wooden packages.

"In his order today the administrator declared an emergency to exist in the lumber industry—the emergency justifying the establishment of a minimum price based on reasonable costs determined and approved in the order.

"Prior to the issuance of the order the administrator approved an amendment of the code authorizing him to determine reasonable costs during an emergency in the industry."

It was said at NRA headquarters last night that this order would not be immediate available. It was expected to be made, however, some time during today.

The first step toward shaping an unified policy toward problems facing industry under codes, NRA officials pointed out, was taken as an aid toward simplifying the relationship of NRA to industry in carrying out the general policies of the industrial recovery act.

NRA officials stressed that development of a unified policy program will not affect codes already approved as long as they are functioning without difficulty. But changes will be made, however, where study reveals that any code provision is proving troublesome administratively or is not operating in harmony with purposes of the National industrial recovery act. Further, whenever desired by the industry of whenever the occasion is appropriate changes in existing code provisions will be made.

It will be the duty of the Division of Research and Planning and the deputy administrators to observe the operations of coded industry, it was pointed out.

A statement said:

"As to codes that are now pending before NRA, if they are in final form and have been assented to by the industry before the date of announcement of a general policy, such codes, if otherwise acceptable, will be approved. However, provisions which may be flatly inconsistent with essentials of such general policy will be stayed, to the extent of such inconsistency, until the industry shows why such portions should not be permanently stayed or made to conform in substance wtih such policy.

Experience of the last 13 months has developed certain rules which are designed to give the best results to the greatest number in any industry. Application of these rules or policies comprise practical problems and not arbitrary demands. Such action is contemplated in line with the theory th taindustry shall help itself, and it does not intend to unsettle a satisfactory situation for the arbitrary purpose of bringing an industry's code into line with a rigid policy.

"Deputy administrators and the Division of Research and Planning will keep close watch on the administrative works of code provisions. An unaccounted-for number of complaints from any group in industry, protests from labor, small business, or consumers, will cause immediate investigation by the NRA to the end that the abuse may be corrected."

Machado Escapes From U. S. Shores

New York, July 16 (AP).—Gerardo Machado, whom Cuba seeks to extradite to face trial for crimes he allegedly committed while he was the republic's president, has made good his escape to the Dominican Republic.

Authoritative Cuban sources today definitely confirmed presistent rumors that the former executive, who had been sought intensively here by Federal officers, had left the United States.

Pennsylvanians to Hold Annual Supper Tonight

The Pennsylvania Democratic Club will held its annual supper dance at 9 p. m. today at the Rossdhu Castle Club.

Among prominent Democrats who have accepted invitations are Joseph F. Duffey, National committeeman, and candidate for the United States Senate from Pennsylvania, and Clinton Illenberger, Third Assistant Postmaster General.

Bremer Case Suspect Arrested in Robbery

Portland, Me., July 16 (AP).—Theodore Craig, alias Theodore Bentz, 31, was arrested here today on a Federal warrant charging him with robbing the Caledonian National Bank of Danville, Vt., of $10,000.

Authorities said he also was wanted for questioning in connection with the kidnaping of Edward G. Bremer, wealthy Milwaukee brewer.

Menace of Armed Warfare Ties Up Gloucester Fishing

Coast Guard May Act to End Factional Strife Over Prices.

Gloucester, Mass., July 16 (AP)—The menace of gunplay on the high seas hung over the faction-torn mackerel fleet of this ancient seaport tonight.

Coast Guard officials promised every assistance at their disposal to see that there is no bloodshed but to the first victim of high seas strong-arm methods, Capt. John Morash, of the schooner Leretha, they could offer little in the way of redress.

The strong feeling between the "Yankee" and one of the "Italian" factions of the fleet, which has smouldered in recent weeks, flared into the open Saturday when Morash's schooner was overhauled 12 miles off the coast, he reported, by the schooner Natalie II and ordered at gunpoint to put about.

The Natalie had 30 men of the Italian faction aboard, Morash reported to Coast Guard officials here and in Boston, and one of them told him if he didn't return he would "blow my brains out." The sailor, Morash said, fingered a gun.

Morash put back to avoid trouble and today this port was in a turmoil and its mackerel fleet of 60 ships tied to the wharves.

The 6-foot, 3-inch skipper, refusing to be deterred by threats, took his case to United States officials at Boston, where he was told that, if necessary, a Coast Guard boat would accompany him out and back on his next trip.

The basis of the trouble lies in the question of mackerel prices. Recently prices dropped considerably and one of two Italian factions wanted all ships to remain in port to create an artificial scarcity of fish. Another Italian faction sided with the "Yankee" skippers who have advocated continuance of fishing with the proviso that the fish be salted to await higher prices.

Since most of the dissident Italian craft are not equipped to salt their fish their owners are opposed to any fishing until the code authority at Washington has done something about prices.

U. S. Refuses To Haggle Over Berlin Interest

capable responsibility" of Berlin to grant American investors treatment that is no less favorable than that which is or may be accorded to the investors of other countries.

Text of Note.

"The United States Government considers it essential," the note said, "in view of the commitments reported recently to have been entered into by the German government, with respect to British holders of German bonds, to insist that measures be taken without delay to assure equally favorable treatment to American holders of such securities.

"The German government is aware, as a result of the repeated representations, written and oral, that have been made to it, both through the American Embassy at Berlin and through its own embassy at Washington, that this government considers as an inescapable responsibility of the German government the extension to American investors of treatment that is no less favorable than that which is or may be accorded to the investors of other countries.

"The American Government does not feel that this expectation can be made contingent upon its entering into special agreements as new and additional inducements to the observance of that obligation. It should perhaps be pointed out that the American Government has consistently pursued a policy of refusing to undertake direct negotiations of settlements on behalf of holders of foreign securities. Since the original contracts were entered into with private citizens insofar as the United States is concerned, this Government has felt that subsequent negotiations for settlements should be left to the direct representatives of the bondholders. This, however, has in no sense implied indifference to the treatment accorded them. The American Government has in fact at all times insisted on and defende their right to equality of treatment as compared with the treatment given nationals of other countries.

Differentiation is Social.

"With respect to the specific situation now under consideration, the American Government desires to stress the fact that it cannot recognize the claim on the part of a foreign government to withhold such equal treatment or to render it contingent upon special agreements involving trade concessions, clearing arrangements, or similar measures. Furthermore, in the opinion of the American Government there can be no justification for differentiation between creditors having exactly the same unequivocal pledges from the German government, and in whose favor exactly the same revenues were hpothecated with a clear absence of reservations, written or implied, at the time the obligations were contracted.

"In the circumstances the American Government must request an early indication on the part of the German government of the remedial measures which it proposes to take."

Bonds Are Direct Obligation.

The Dawes loan is officially designated, the Associated Press explained, as the German external loan of 1924. Bonds, bearing 7 per cent interest, weer issued in different currencies and floated in the United States, Great Britain, Belgium, France, Holland, Italy, Sweden, Switzerland and Germany to yield approximately 800,000,000 gold marks (about $190,400,000 at that time).

Paragraph 3 of the agreement entered into between the German government and the trustees for the bondholders provided that all bonds issued by the German government shall rank equally "irrespective of date or place of issue or otherwise."

An official statement, prepared by Dr. aHns Luther, Minister of Finance (now Ambassador to the United States), stated the loan was "a direct and unconditional obligation of the German government chargeable on all the assets and revenues of the government."

Young Loan Floated in 1930.

The Young loan is officially the German government international 5½ per cent loan of 1930, amounting to approximately $300,000,000, of which one-third was for the German railways, telegraph and postoffice, and two-thirds for obligations to creditor governments.

In addition to carrying the promise for equal treatment the bonds were described by Paul Moldenhauer, Minister of Finance, as follows:

"The payment of the principal, interest and sinking fund of the loan is a direct and unconditional obligation of the German government to the bondholder, for which the full faith and credit of the German government are pledged."

Five Per Cent More on These Workers' Checks

Troops Sent To Hunt Baby Gone 4 Days

State Guards Join in New Combing of Connor Neighborhood.

Hartsdale, N. Y., July 16 (AP). Four days after Bobby Connor disappeared from the home of his parents in secluded Hartsdale Manor, there was no evidence tonight to indicate whether the towhaired tyke was alive or dead.

Although the theory of kidnaping gradually faded, fresh impetus to the search was given today with the arrival of a troop of State police, sent under direct orders from Gov. Herbert Lehman, to join in a new combing of the Westchester countryside.

Federal agents still remained in the hunt and definite word came from Washington spiking reports the Government was withdrawing from the investigation.

No Authentic Kidnap Notes.

No authentic kidnap notes have been received, so far as is known, giving strength to one police theory the 21-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Connor was struck by anautomobile and his body carried off.

The parents still cling to the belief the boy is alive, hoping that he had merely strayed away from home. They scouted the theory of ransom, pointing to their modest circumstances.

Over Westchester County, in the neighborhood of Hartsdale, fire whistles sounded at noon to call out a thousand searchers for the second hunt through wooded estates.

Firemen and police, volunteers and Boy Scouts, neighbors and friends, State police and Federal agents—with axes to slash through underbrush—answered the call.

To Search Baby Farms.

The hunt also spread to New York City. At the request of the investigators, Vincent T. Pisarra, superintendent of the Children's Society of New York, started a search through all baby farms in the metropolitan area.

To New Jersey the law sent for bloodhounds to take up the trail from the playground by the Connor home—although admitting the heavy ranins of Sunday undoubtedly lessened their value.

The authorities also considered an appeal to the Government to send CCC workers to join the hunt.

ReunitedTammany Headed by Dooling

A. Ruddy, Dooling's sole opponent, and then cast a unanimous ballot for the former football star, one of the youngest men ever to sit on Tammany's high ruling board.

Tammany had been leaderless since April 20, when the rising tide of dissatisfaction with Curry culminated in his ouster, the first in the Hall's history.

The new leader inherited his political mantle three years ago at the death of his father, Peter J. Dooling, for 30 years leader of the southern part of the Fifth Assembly District.

He first won political distinction by rebelling against the Curry dictatorship a year ago. He opposed the leader's selection of a judicial candidate and won his fight. This victory made him the logical generalissimo of the anti-Curry forces last spring.

Dooling was educated at the grammar and high schools of St. Francis Xavier and in the law school of Fordham University, where he won distinction as a football and baseball player.

He served overseas with the 351st Field Artillery, Ninety-second Division, during the World War.

Unmarried, he lives in the old Dooling residence on West Forty-third street, near the political headquarters of his district, from which his father had battled for Curry's election five years ago. The elder Dooling and Curry had been lifelong friends.

The son had been so active in the management of the Dooling district that his elevation to its leadership followed promptly the father's death.

175,000-Acre Park Deal in Va. Nears End

Hate Officials Hoping to Conclude Work in 15 Days.

Harrisonburg, Va., July 16 (Spl.)—Virginia's ten-year job of acquiring and transferring 175,000 acres in the Blue Ridge Mountains, extending from Front Royal to Waynesboro, to the Federal Government for conversion into the first great National Park in the East will be completed within 15 days, it was learned tonight.

The deed has been formally approved by Attorney General A. P. Staples on behalf of the State. A copy is now with the National Park Service officials. If they approve the boundary lines, William E. Carson, chairman, will call a meeting of the Virginia Conservative Commission for July 27. That body, which has handled the work of buying the land, will be asked to approve the deed. When this is done, it will be sent Gov. Peery for signature. When he and Mr. Carson, as conservation commission chairman, signe the deed as representatives of Virginia, this will complete the State's job.

The deed then will be turned over to Secretary Ickes of the Department of Interior, who will refer it to Attorney Genetal Cummings.

The State of Virginia, if the National Park Service officials approve the boundary lines withlu the next ten days, will complete its formalities in about two weeks.

Formal acceptance of the deed by the Federalt Government and the dedication of the park, it was added, are questions to be determined by Secrettary Ickes tnd National Park Service officials.

Further, it was allege dthere was a loss of $32,407.67 by the sale of the bank's bonds and the misapplication of the proceeds, and a loss of $197,096.49 by paying interest to savings accounts depositors when there were no earnings available for the interest.

Parran Enters Race for Post As Prosecutor

U. S. Commissioner Files in Prince Georges Contest.

United States Commissioner J. Frank Parran, of Brandywine, Md., yesterday filed his candidacy for State's attorney for Prince Georges County. He is a Republican.

Mr. Parran, who served as State's attorney for the county for the term 1927-1931, gained widespread note with his prosecution of the notorious Brady bombing case, which occurred at Seat Pleasant, Md., in 1929.

A native of Brandywine, he comes from a family known throughout the State as the Republican leaders of southern Maryland. He served in the Maryland Senate from 1920 to 1922. He also served as State's attorney for Charles County in 1900 and several years thereafter.

In 1923 he was a candidate for the chief judgeship of the Seventh Judicial Circuit. He was defeated by the encumbent, Judge J. Mitchell Digges.

Adrian Fisher, a prominent attorney of Seat Pleasant, also has been repeatedly reported as another possible candidate on the Republican ticket. However, it was reported yesterday that he definitely would not run.

The only other candidate to file for the office has been Robert W. McCullough, corporation council of Cheverly, Md. He is a Democrat. The encumbent, Alan Bowie, of Brandywine, also is expected to file his candidacy before the September primaries.

Ancient Bicycle-Riding Rules Revived as Sport Gains Favor

Ammonia Guns Were Used to Chase Dogs; Songs Are Approved.

Chicago, July 16 (AP).—To ride without using the handlebars is a little ostentatious; the wellebehaved bicyclist shuns this.

However, it is proper to sing while cycling, if in a well-modulated manner, and it is quite correct to invite a lady cycling companion to park her wheel and swig a sarparilla.

The recurrence of the bicycle, a sport revival which has jumped Chicago's cycling fans from a few dozen to many thousand, finds many of the troublesome points of cycle etiquette already settled.

Behavior books of the late '80s and the '90s bristle with rulings by the social arbiters of the period. Some more of their hints, if they're any good to you, are:

Gentleman riders will, of course, allow their fainter companions to set the riding pace; and she will proceed at a sedate speed, so as not to frighten pedestrians.

Cyclists of either gender will try to restrain the natural exhiliaration of "whirling along at a giddy clip;" don't let it go to your head.

If an ill-mannered dog should attack the cycling party, the gentleman's duty is clear. He will dismount, after excusing himself, and shoo the dog away. A water gun, spiked with a little ammonia, is suggested for this. The gentleman will, of course, apologize for the dog.

Should a "tyre" give out, the gentleman fixes it, accepting the lady's quiet thanks.

As to all other points, said writers in Godeys Magazine, act just as you would if you weren't on a bicycle. This covers tipping your hat to passing women and choosing only "friends and equals" as riding companions, express concern when a chum rides into a rosebush or over an embankment.

Two Mail Fraud Suspects Shift Blame to Bank

Attorney Tries to Prove Firm Sought Stock, Then Resold It.

New York, July 16 (AP).—James C. McKay and William J. Graham, Reno, Nev., promoters, revealed one of the chief points of their defense against mail fraud charges today when they contended the mails were not used actually in furtherance of swindles.

John Taafe, San Francisco counsel for the Reno men, explained the point to the court in recross-examination of Joseph M. Fuetsch, assistant cashier of the Riverside Bank of Reno.

Fuetsch identified records which showed that the bank sold certain stock for Miss Kathryn K. Beeson, of New York and Pittsburgh, at 93⅜, and reported a sale price of 93 to Miss Beeson, the bank also taking a commission.

Transaction Explained.

"Why didn't you tell Miss Beeson you were taking a profit?" Taafe asked.

"I didn't think it was necessary," Fuetsch said.

When Taafe started to ask about another block of stock, Federal Judge Carroll C. Hincks demanded that he make clear what he was trying to show.

"I am trying to show," he said, "that when the bank sent letters through the mails regarding these transactions it was dealing in its own stock, that the bank bought the stock and sold it for a profit."

If the defense point carried, the Government's case would collapse because no Federal statute would have been violated. Miss Beeson was one of 42 alleged victims of an international swindling ring.

The victims, it has been shown, either lent their cash through the Riverside Bank or had the Riverside Bank sell stock for them. The money received was then turned over to confidence men, who pretended they were ready to collect huge race winnings or stock profits.

Government Charges.

The Government charges that even though the bank acted in good faith when it used the mails to arrange the sales or transfers, the use constituted an offense by any parties to the swindles.

Fuetsch had testified that McKay and Graham introduced and guaranteed victims to the bank, and even furnished cash so there would be no delay in getting it into hands of the victims.

Corn-Hog Contracts to Give Rockingham County $75,000

Harrisonburg, Va., July 16 (Spl.). The 673 corn-hog reduction contracts sent to Washington today by County Agent S. M. Cox will bring approximately $75,000 to Rockingham farmers within ten days or two weeks.

Rockingham is the first of the larger counties in Virginia to have the contracts ready for forwarding. Augusta County ranks first in the number of contracts and Shenandoah is third.

Only three Rockingham farmers refused to sign after the contracts were reviewed and corrections made by the State board of review, at Richmond, headed by Henry M. Taylor. Nat H. Keezell, of Keezletown; John H. Burner, of McGaheysville, and E. C. Ralston, of Dayton, are members of the board of directors of the Rockingham Corn-Hog Association, which prepared the contracts.

The Rockingham County Wheat Association, composed of those farmers, who signed wheat reduction control contracts, will begin reorganization at a series of community meetings starting tomorrow. A director and two community committeemen will be named at each meeting.

The wheat program has brought in approximately $65,000 to Rockingham farmers. The Administration expense, including the inspection of acreage, has amounted to 2.4 cents a bushel. The old association will be able to carry over a surplus for the work of the new group. The farmers will receive almost 27 cents over the market price for wheat. The original estimate was 24 cents.

Vanderbilt Yacht Wins In America's Cup Trial

Newport, R. I., July 16 (AP).—Rainbow, skippered by Harold S. Vanderbilt, today defeated Weetamoe, skippered by Dick Boardman, by 3 minutes and 39 seconds over a 30-mile course in the briskest breeze yet to favor the trials to select a defender of the America's Cup.

Most of Rainbow's lead was accounted for by the fact that Weetamoe went over the starting line three seconds before the signal and was recalled and forced to recross it. In this manner she lost approximately three minutes.

Morals Trial Perjury Bared

State's Star Witness in Film Probe Admits Lie on Arrest.

Los Angeles, July 16 (AP).—June de Long, the State's star witness in the ollywood morals case, admitted today she had testified falsely last week khen she denied having been arrested here in March, 1931, on a morals charge.

"I figured I had already disgraced myself," she said, "and I couldn't see where the question had anything to do with this case."

Dave Allen, former head of Central Casting Corporation which handles the 17,000 extra film players of Hollywood for the motion picture studios, and Gloria Marsh, the two defendants with whom Miss de Long has testified she engaged in an immoral party, peered intently at the witness as she made her admission.

No mention was made in the courtroom today of Miss de Long's dramatic disappearance and recovery last Saturday after she had penned a note to her guard, asserting she planned to commit suicide.

The largest crowd yet to seek admission at the trial, which was one week old today, started forming outside the courtroom three hours before the hearing convened at 10 a. m. Only 200 were permitted to enter the courtroom.

Goldsborough To Select Race Within 2 Days

Survey to Determine if He Runs for Senate or Governorship.

Baltimore, July 16 (Spl.).—Senator Phillips Lee Goldsborough is to decide within 48 hours whether he will run for the Republican gubernatorial nomination.

His friends here revealed this today, and also let it be known that the Senator is continuing his survey of the State to determine sentiment. For three weeks he has been conducting his canvass. A group of 20 prominent Republicans in Baltimore has been urging that he enter the race.

In the event he decides against the gubernatorial campaign, he probably will run for reelection to the Senate, it is said.

The Senatorial election of 1928, in which Mr. Goldsborough defeated Senator William Cabell Bruce, the Democratic candidate, showed clearly that his strength lies in the counties. Senator Bruce carried Baltimore City by 4,000, but Senator Goldsborough carried the Maryland counties by 40,000.

All Hinges on Strength Now.

If Senator Goldsborough decides that his strength this year approaches that of 1928, there is said to be no doubt that he will enter the gubernatorial campaign.

One of the Republican gubernatorial candidates already in the race, H. Webster Smith, opened city headquarters in the American Building here today, with Frank T. Benson, formerly chief of the income tax division of the Internal Revenue Department in Maryland, in charge.

Mr. Smith today started his most ambitious campaign trip. Accompanied by his wife and five Republican leaders, he started out in his sound-truck caravan for a tour that will take him to Annapolis, Glen Burnie, Eldersburg, Sykesville, Mount Airy, Taylorsville, Westminster, New Windsor, Linwood, Union Bridge, Uniontown, Union Mills, Emmitsburg, Manchester and Taneytown.

Democrats Are Inactive.

In the Democratic camp there was little activity today. George L. Radcliffe, candidate for the Democratic nomination for the United States Senate, conferred with lieutenants at his headquarters, but the topic was not divulged.

There was some talk today of the possible candidacy of Adjt. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, commander of the Maryland National Guard, for the Senatorial nomination. Howard Bruce, Democratic National committeeman from Maryland, also has been urged to enter, and if both he and Gen. Reckord do so, Mr. Radcliffe will be faced with a three-cornered primary fight that will rival in intensity the Ritchie-Jackson-Conley gubernatorial fight.

Smith and Quenstedt Meetin Annapolis

Annapolis, Md., July 16 (Spl.).—Two of the Republican candidates for the gubernatorial nomination, H. Webster Smith of Baltimore, and Mayor Walter E. Quenstedt, of Annapolis, were on the alert here tonight in th interest of their candidacies, and incidentally exchanged personal greetings.

Mr. Smith, who has been pursuing a more active campaign, had a special mission. He wanted to gain an insight into G. O. P. conditions in Anne Arundel County. He held conferences with Mayor uenstedt, former Postmaster Joseph M. Armstrong, Charles H. Sherman, prominent party worker in the city, and representatives of several of the outlying districts, who acquainted him with apparent dissension within the ranks. Later, uenstedt was guest of honor at the annual carnival of the West Annapolis Volunteer Fire Company. It was Mayors' Night at the fete.

Although Mayor uenstedt has repeatedly announced that he is in the fight to the end, he has done little active campaigning. While his strong personal following locally is beyond question, a few nights ago a group of Republicans, said to represent all districts, got together and proceeded to draft a tentative slate of candidates. The was not only not invited to the powwow, but his candidacy for Governor was not touched upon. On the contrary, the group, which styles itself the Central Republican Club, endorsed Harry W. Nice. Little weight appears to have been given to the slte-making effort, however, as several party men mentioned as candidates, or as having attended the gathering, disclaimed any connection.

Extortionists Send New Note

Baltimore Girl, 15, Again Threatened; $800 Demanded.

Baltimore, July 16 (AP).—A fourth and apparently final note demanding payment of $800 to save 15-year-old Evelyn Lowe from kidnaping was found today.

The note, signed "H.", was discovered under the back door by the girl herself as she stepped out of the house to hang up some newly laundered clothes.

The other three notes were received last week. One of them, tied to a rock, was hurled through a window of the modest home in Shipley Heights occupied by the girl, her mother and step father, Jesse Cristman, a truck driver.

Ten days ago, a group of men attempted to set the girl to enter their automobile.

United States District Attorney Bernard J. Flynn announced that special agents of the Federal department were entering the case.

Court Upholds Right of Wife To Sue Rival

Richmond, July 16 (AP).—Judge Robert N. Pollard, of Richmond Law and Equity Court, today set forth the right of a wife to sue in her own right and collect damages from another woman with whom her husband has consorted.

The ruling is at variance with the old English common law, on which most Virginia and American law rests.

Judge Pollard's decision was made as he upheld a jury verdict in the case of Mrs. Blanche M. Eiseman against Mrs. Courtney L. Lindsay, in which $5,000 damages were asked and an award of $1,250 made.

The jurist said that while it was conceded at common law that a wife could not maintain such an action as that involved in the case in question;

"The more recent, and it seems to me better considered cases, hold that while the adultery of the wife may be more injurious in its consequences than that of her husband, yet her right is in principle the same as his, and no matter what the ancient doctrine may have been, the wife as well as the husband may maintain such a suit."

Virginia Puts New 3.2 Beer Rule in Effect

Brew Not Marked as to Strength Considered High Test.

Richmond, July 16 (Spl.).—New beer regulations of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board went into effect today, providing that only beer of 3.2 per cent alcohol content or less may be sold by establishments not regularly licensed by the ABC department.

Beer and other malt liquors of 3.2 content or less sold by establishments without ABC beer licenses must bear a label it is of no more than 3.2. Under the board rules, effective today, all beer not so marked will be considered ipso facto of stronger alcoholic content.

The places selling 3.2 beer are operating under the September, 1933, beer law, administered by the tax department. Al other beer licenses are under the ABC act, and under ABC department control.

The control law created two classifications for malt beverages, those above 3.2, called "alcoholic beverages" and those of that strength or lower left in the category of soft drinks. Establishments with ABC board licenses may continue to sell both, just as they do now.

The department of taxation and the ABC department, realizing that the double classification of malt liquors might cause confusion, gave the beer-selling establishments plenty of time to adjust themselves to the new rules. Hitherto 3.2 licensees have been selling all kinds of beer.

State's Attorneys Confer on Salary

Meet With Compensation Board of Virginia.

Richmond, July 16 (AP).—Commonwealth's attorneys from counties of more than 20,000 population conferred here today with the new compensation board which is to fix their salaries in compliance with an act of the last legislature.

The new pay system, a switch from the time-honored fee system to a straight salary basis, will be completed in about ten days, E. R. Combs, chairman of the board, said.

The assembly set fort hthe maximum and minimum pay rates, but left it to the board to decide just where, between the top and bottom limits, an individual officer should be placed. The volume of work handled and the expenses necessary to the proper conduct of his office are to be considered by the board.

Relics of Pioneer Days Found In Fort Frederick Restoration

Revolutionary War Cannon Balls, Buttons and Pottery Are Among Objects Unearthed by the CCC Workers on Project.

By J. E. Hager.

Hagerstown, Md., July 16.—Relics of pioneer days of Washington County, at a time when the early settlers were battling the Indians, are being uncovered almost daily by CCC workers who are preparing the way for the restoration of old Fort Frederick, built in 1756 by order of Maryland's Governor, Horatio Sharp.

Last week two 6-pound cannon balls, of the kind used during the Revolutionary War, were unearthed from beneath the foundations of the officers' quarters within the walls of the fort, while a number of metal buttons, pottery and other small objects of stone and metal have been found.

The National Park Service of the Interior Department is directing the restoration, with the labor being furnished by the Civilian Conservation Corps, and costs are met with the emergency conservation work funds.

300 Park Projects.

The restoration of Fort Frederick, probably the best preserved of the chain of frontier forts and block houses, is one of 300 State park projects being conducted by the Park Service, under supervision of Assistant Director Conrad L. Wirth.

The work to date, which is in preparation for the actual restoration of the walls, three barracks inside the walls and the great entrance gate, has been the excavation of the foundations of what were apparently three structures within the fort, believed to have been one officers' quarters and two barracks for soldiers quartered there during three wars—the French and Indian, Revolutionary and Civil Wars.

It was during these excavations that the relics were found. CCC workers also are cleaning up the surrounding acreage, where a park will be located and cabins for tourists erected of logs.

To Build Boulevard.

From the National highway, 15 miles west of Hagerstown, a boulevard will lead to the fort.

In discussing the program at Fort Frederick, Arno B. Cammerer, director of the park service, said that it was planned to have the fort exactly as it was in 1756, when it defended 700 men, women and children from the French-inspired Indians following Gen Braddock's defeat.

During the Revolutionary War it had its garrison under Col. Moses Rawlings and received many British prisoners. During the Civil War it was a frontier fort again, occupied by the First Maryland Regiment under Gen. John R. Kenly. A rough breach was knocked in the south wall and a cannon struck through to sweep the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, C. &. O. Canal and a road on the Virginia side of the Potomac River.

Liquor Rules Tightened by Virginia Board

A B C Group Has Issued 21 Regulations Since March 22.

Richmond, July 16 (AP).—Twenty-one regulations, some supplementing and explaining sections of the ABC act and others issued under its authority with the full force and effect of law, have been promulgated by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board since the law became effective March 22—less than four months ago.

A recapitulation of the regulations today showed that they fall, roughly, into five groups, as follows: Concerned with importation, shipment, transportation and delivery of wines, beers and spirits; explaining and facilitating the wholesale distribution of wine and beer; treating of advertising matters; pertaining to licenses and licensees, and a miscellaneous collection of rulings not numerous enough to classify.

When Virginia became a market, with restrictions, for the first time in 17 years for alcoholic beverages, importation of such beverages became the first problem. The law provides that all alcoholic beverages, except wine and beer, must be consigned to the board and that the board may permit such orders by it from outside the State to be shipped direct to persons for industrial purposes, to wholesale druggists, druggists and hospitals.

Beer and Wine Rule.

A subsection provided that wine coming into the State may be consigned to the board or to persons holding wholesale licenses and that, with all orders going through the board, the board might permit delivery direct to the retail licensee. The same ruling applied to beer.

No confusion arose from the subsection on wine, but the board in its first supplementary regulation specified that no beer of alcoholic content over 3.2 per cent would be permitted to be imported, shipped, transported or brought into the State by any way or by any person except those licensed by the ABC board to sell.

That attempts were made—successfully—to beat this regulation is acknowledged by the board's order of June 6, which became effective yesterday. To outwit the petty lawbreakers who dodged the issue by stripping beer bottles of labels and protesting that they received the bottles in that condition, and that, so far as they knew they were selling beer not over 3.2, the board issued a ruling that bottles or containers not specifically labeled 3.2 would be considered as liquids of higher alcoholic content and treated by the board as such. This stands for all beer, ale, lager beer, porter, wine and similar fermented malt or vinous liquor.

Intrastate Regulations.

No clarification of the law in relation to distilled spirits was deemed necessary until June 20, when an order was passed regulating intrastate transportation. This ruling provides for the transportation of 1 gallon or less of distilled spirits without written permission from the board in two cases. The first, when the Government stamp or seal or both appear on the container, as evidence that the liquor was legally obtained, and the second, when the liquor is in the possession or in the baggage of the person transporting it and is not for resale.

The third and latest regulation in this group was passed June 29 and permits direct importation through the United States customs.

The regulations in the second group set forth various rules for wholesale dealers. Detailing the provisions of section 18-e and b, this order explains that wholesale distributors must furnish to the board the names, merchandise and terms of the firms or persons from whom they wish to buy wines and beers. The board then issues the wholesale dealer a transportation permit to bring the merchandise in and may also permit him to order in bulk and bottle his wine for sale to the board or for outside shipment. The ruling further demands that the wholesaler furnish the board with an inventory of stock if so desires; that he report to the board all out-of-State sales and that he make his place of business and records available for inspection at any time. The Virginia distributor is permitted to sell to the retail licensees through the board on order blanks obtained from the board.

Receipts as Collateral.

A ruling of June 6 permits the wholesale wine distributor to use his warehouse receipts for wine as collateral security with banks and banking institutions.

By a regulation of May 1, all agents or solicitors representing one distributor were required to pay a $5 registration fee to the board plus $1 additional for every other firm they represented.

All warehouses or other places approved for delivery depots are required to post a bond according to a regulation of April 30, which seeks to protect both the distributor and the retail licensee.

The advertising regulations in the third group supplement section 48 and specify that newspaper, radio and outdoor advertising shall confine itself to a moderate statement of the distinguishing quality of the liquor it advertises. No appeal to purchase liquor, other than wine or beer, from any specified place in the State and no appeal to order by mail is permitted. Beneficial or tonic effects of spirits may not be suggested.

The regulations affecting outdoor advertising in addition to this prohibit the retail licensee from placing any sign within 500 yards of his place of business if the sign contains his name or address or advertises the name of any particular brand of wine or beer. It also prohibits him from accepting any display advertising matter from any wholesaler or bottler. Advertising signs may not be placed within 500 yards of a Government store nor may there be any indication from less than that distance that liquor may be purchased there.

Attends Meeting.

Driver Bound And Cigarette Cargo Seized

Two Bandits Make Haul at Elkton, Md., Another Trucker Quizzed.

Elkton, Md., July 16 (AP).—Highway robbers attacked a large truck early today, left its driver bound and blindfolded in the woods, and made off with its cargo of cigarettes in another truck.

Luther W. Jacobs, of Baltimore, the driver, told State police that two men leaped on his truck from another car as he was driving over Principio Hill on the way to Philadelphia, threatened him with revolvers and ordered him to drive in a side road.

There they blindfolded him, Jacobs said, but he could hear another truck drive in and the men unloading his truck's load to the other vehicle. He was then bound and thrown into the woods, he said.

By the time Jacobs freed himself from the rope with which he was tied and reported the case to authorities, his abandoned truck had already been found and an investigation was under way.

The truck was owned by the Norton Motor Lines, of Charlotte, N. C.

Another Driver Quizzed On Hijacking Report

Fincastle, Va., July 16 (AP).—Clyde Enslow, of Huntington, W. Va., is being detained here by Boutetourt County officers while they and State police investigate his story of a hijacking episode on Route 12 near here today when a truckload of tobacco and cigarettes was transferred to another truck, which drove away.

Enslow was driving a truck he says is owned by the Dunabar Transportation Co., of Huntington, and had picked up his cargo at Winston-Salem, N. C. Near Booze Filling Station, several miles north of here, he said, two men rushed out from each side of the road and held him up.

The driver says he was forced to slide over while the gunholder took his place at the wheel. Three other men then got into the truck. The laden truck then was turned back south on the road and another truck came up and trailed it. The two proceeded back toward Fincastle until near the Fair Grounds, when the tobacco and cigarettes were transferred to the second truck.

Moorefield Suburb Annexed to Town

Moorefield, W. Va., July 16 (Spl.) A suburban section of Moorefield, which has been trying since March to vote itself into Moorefield, apparently has succeeded. The third vote on the question Saturday today showed:

Voters inside the present Corporate limits; for the change, 124; against, 9. Voters outside the present corporate limits; for the change, 128; against, 63.

On each of the previous ballots, voters inside the city had supported the plan.

Page Mr. Walton; Two Fishermen Catch Same Fish

Beckley, W. Va., July 16 (Spl.).—Here is a fish story—and it's true. Howard Price Meadows and Karl Johann Klaus were fishing in a stream near here the other day.

"I've a bite," Howard said.

"And I've got a bite," Karl also said, as he began reeling in.

Presently one fish was drawn from the water. It had evidently been hungry for it had gobbled the bait of both fishermen at about the same time and both hooks were snagged in its mouth.

Rules for Use Of Road Cash Protect Labor

U. S. Funds for Virginia Assure Present Force Against Lay-offs.

Richmond, July 16 (AP).—Instructions for the expenditure of $3,765,000 of Federal highway funds were received today by State Highway Commissioner Henry G. Shirley. Among them are clauses assuring the present highway force against layoffs for fiscal reasons and making possible much new construction.

A commission meeting has been called for Thursday at which the Federal instructions will be studied and a plan for their early application considered. Commissioner Shirley said. No State funds will be available for incorporation with the Federal money, Shirley said, since maintenance of the old primary system, plus the county feeder system, has been absorbing all Virginia road cash.

The Federal fund, drawn as Virginia's share in the $200,000,000 appropriated in the Cartwright law, is to be divided after the following schedule:

Fifty per cent goes to old Federal roads, arterial highways such as U. S. Route No. 1; 25 per cent to State highways and rural post roads not in the Federal system, and 25 per cent for onks of Federal aid roads within city limits. Fifty per cent of the whole must be spent in counties.

The bill gives priority rights to the following types of new construction: The closing of gaps in the Federal-id highway system, the reduction of hazards to highway traffic by the elimination or rebuilding of roadways, building of footpaths, replacement of unsafe bridges, the construction of routes to avoid congested areas and the construction or reconstruction of projects of particular benefit or service to other agencies of the Government.

The rules specify that no convict labor be used on projects nor shall any material produced by convict labor be employed.

All contracts under the act, the regulations set forth, shall prescribe the minimum rates of wages, as predetermined by the State highway department, which contractors shall pay different classes of labor. Such minimum must be set forth in advertisements for bids and in any proposals on bids which are submitted.

The regulations insist that wages shall be "just and reasonable compensation sufficient to provide, for the hours of labor as limited, a standard of living in decency and comfort."

Hours are to be limited, whenever practicable, to 30 per week. Human labor is to be used in place of machinery "whenever practicable and consistent with sound economy and public advantage."

Suicide of Youth In Richmond Last Week Is Revealed

Richmond, July 16 (Spl.).—William Bagby, 18, San Marcos, Tex., died last Wednesday in his room at the Y. M. C. A. from gun shot wounds.

Coroner J. M. Whitfield issued a certificate of suicide. The case appeared on police record for the first time today.

Bagby, whose parents are missionaries in Sao Paulo, Brazil, was said by R. M. Caveness, president of the San Marcos Baptist Academy, to have attended that institution for three years, but to have been suspended late this spring for an infraction of the rules.

Bagby's body was found in a pool of blood Wednesday morning. He had been dead about 24 hours.

Y. M. C. A. officials said Bagby was unemployed. An uncle, J. M. Adams, of Whitestone, was notified.

Texas U. Receives More Gas Profits

New Well Assures Bigger Income in Future.

Austin, Tex. (U.P.).—The University of Texas, "richest educational institution," looks confidently for a big increase in the mineral royalties that have brought it wealth.

Reports to its mineral department say that a stupendous natural gas supply has been struck in Andrews County, where the university holds 294,000 acres of land. A well with a flow of 10,500,000 cubic feet of gas daily has been brought in by Humble Oil Refining Co., and is to be connected for commercial uses.

Drilling on University of Texas land in Ector County will test the likelihood that the oil field there may be extended, and a deep well test is planned in Reagan County on university land. Regents, familiar with the oil industry, have estimated the ultimate value of the university lands at $200,000,000.

State Line Makes Trouble for Liquor Buyers in Bristol

Bristol, Va.-Tenn., July 16 (Spl.). Persons who purchase liquor at the local ABC dispensary are careful to keep on the north side of State street, for on the south side lies Bristol, Tenn., in which all liquor, Virginia legal or otherwise, is forbidden.

The Virginia dispensary is located on State street, less than 50 feet from the State line, and purchasers of liquor must go a considerable distance out of their way in returning to the heart of the business section, to avoid going into Tennessee. To proceed by the usual route would be to cross to the other side of the street, thereby running the risk of being arrested by Tennessee officers on charges of transporting.

Chief of Police R. L. Morton, of Bristol, Tenn., and Sheriff J. D. Newland, of Sullivan County, Tenn., today warned that their officers would arrest any one seen with liquor on their side of State street.

The first session is scheduled for the afternoon with opening devotions by Dr. R. S. Owens, pastor of Calvary Church here. Dr. E. D. Poe will make the address of welcome and the annual sermon will be preached by Dr. George D. Stevens, of Roanoke. "Christian Education" will be the subject of an address by Dr. J. J. Wicker, president of Fork Union Military Academy. The Rev. John E. White, business manager of the Virginia Baptist Hospital, also will speak.

A song service and a talk on foreign missions, by Miss Blanche Snydor White, corresponding secretary of the W. M. U. of Virginia, will feature the Tuesday night session. Reports and miscellaneous business are scheduled Wednesday morning and the Rev. E. T. Clark, of Winchester, will speak on "The Relationship of the State Mission Church to the Denominational Program." Other speakers will include Frank T. Cramp, treasurer of the General Association of Virginia. Reports on different phases of church activity also are scheduled for the closing session Wednesday afternoon.

U. S. Considers Power Project On James River

Cheap Electrical Supply for Va. and W. Va. Appears Likely.

Development of a gigantic power project by the Government to supply cheap electricity for Virginia, West Virginia and other States by harnessing the James, New River and tributary streams in the Allegheny Mountains is contemplated by the Roosevelt Administration, it was learned here yesterday from apparently well advised sources.

An expenditure of $125,000,000 to $150,000,000 is estimated, with erection of a system of dams and storage basins in the mountains.

Preliminary surveys have been made by Government engineers. The findings have been laid before authorities close to the President, if not Mr. Roosevelt himself.

Private power companies and municipalities would be permitted to buy current at cost and retail prices would be regulated. There will be no confiscation of property of power companies privately owned, nor will the undertaking be independent of the States.

Privately owned power companies, coal companies and perhaps coal-carrying railroads are expected to oppose the James-New River project. In fact, Alabama coal companies have taken the lead in attacking expansion of the Tennessee Valley Authority and a test case is now before the Federal courts in that State.

A move to formulate a permanent Federal policy for power development which would be presented to Congress in January, is not unexpected. The move is of particular interest to the Appalachian Power Co., whose plan for a dam on New River, in Montgomery County, has been held up for several years as a result of a clash between the company and the Federal Power Commission. The commission ordered Appalachain to take out a major or standard license, giving it supervision of the financial set-up, engineering phases and providing for recapture by the Government.

The Appalachain sought to enjoin the Federal commission from interfering. Judge Luther B. Way, Norfolk, upheld the Federal Power Commission, but the Circuit Court of Appeals held the lower court had no jurisdiction and dismissed the proceedings.

Dam to Erase Ohio Village

Residents Remove Homes From Future Site of Lake.

Cadiz, Ohio (U.P.).—Tappan, a peaceful little village of 60 homes, will be "washed" almost literally off the map of Ohio by completion of one of the dams of the gigantic Muskingum conservation project.

Thirty feet of water, backed up on Little Stillwater Creek, will inundate the site. Some 16 Ohio counties are to be affected by the project. Disposition of the buildings, which include several stores, garages and a few churches, is undecided as yet. Villagers face the certain possibility of their homes either being razed or moved to higher ground.

Withal, however, they have become reconciled and willing enough that flood control should save other villages and cities downstream. The situation has made especially despondent those who fought through three factional elections to secure a new school building, recently completed.

A hill in the village, which will become an island when the valley is flooded, is being sought by several persons as a summer cottage site.

Kaiser's Old Yacht Serves Public Now

Once Haughty Ship Hires Out on Mediterranean.

London (U.P.).—A luxurious white steam yacht which formerly carried the ex-Kaiser on his sea trips now transports ordinary mortals on Mediterranean cruises.

The "Hohenzollern" is now just S. S. "Norman Star," but the decorations recall to the passengers the glories of the former German ruler. On the walls of the one-time suite of the Empress, decorated in mauve silk, are numerous family photographs, one "To dear Willie from Mamma."

Senator's Son Catches 125-Pound Mako Shark

Ocean City, Md., July 16 (Spl.). John G. Townsend 3d, son of Senator John G. Townsend, jr., of Delaware, landed a Mako shark while fishing near here. The shark, a native of New Zealand, is rarely seen in American waters.

The fish measured 5 feet 10 inches and weighed 125 pounds. Townsend said it took 45 minutes to subdue the catch. More than 3,000 feet of line was used.

Navy Ready to Send Men to San Francisco

Vallejo, Calif., July 16 (AP).—At a conference of Naval and Marine Corps officials at Mare Island Navy Yard, called by Rear Admiral Y. S. Williams, commandant, preparations were made to move sailors and marines into the strike area if Washington orders to that effect are received.

Officials of the Navy yard said there were 300 marines and 1,200 sailors available from the cruisers San Francisco and Cincinnati and several destroyers.

$500 Granted For Span Site At Union Mills

Condemnation Contested Because of Alleged Historic Value.

Westminster, Md., July 16 (Spl.). A hearing on condemnation proceedings, instituted by the State roads commission against Mary O. Shriver, Hilda Shriver, Robert S. Shriver and Thomas F. Shriver, to obtain a right of way for a new bridge at Union Mills, resulted in a verdict today for the defendants of $500 in payment for the land.

The defendants contested acquisition of the right of way, amounting to less than one acre, partly because of its alleged historic value. Testimony offered by one witness, later stricken from the record, was that the 116-year-old dwelling had once been the headquarters of Gen. J. E. B. Stuart, Confederate cavalry leader during the Civil War, and that the late James Cardinal Gibbons was a frequent visitor at the home.

Possible damage to a sycamore tree, older than the dwelling, was also cited by witnesses for the Shrivers.

Washed away during heavy rains last August, the bridge at Union Mills was replaced with a temporary structure.

The Carroll County grand jury adjourned late this afternoon after returning 12 indictments. A report submitted by the grand jury contained the recommendations that Carroll County commissioners be instructed to get a complete inventory of all the county's property at the county home and to see that a complete itemized record of all accounts be kept and be furnished the grand jury at its next session.

A recommendation was also made that the board of education, as far as possible, employ necessary labor and architects from among citizens of Carroll County.

Posse Hunts Two Virginia Convicts

Two Escape Camp Near Reedville.

Fredericksburg, Va., July 16 (AP). Two colored prisoners broke from a State road camp near Reedville today and tonight were the object of a widespread search by an armed posse of State and local officers.

The fugitives are Charlie Williams, sentenced to 13 years for housebreaking in Portsmouth, and James Lee, a Caroline County housebreaker, sentenced to 6 years. The men escaped from a camp kitchen, which was being used temporarily as sleeping quarters while the camp was being moved to Rappahannock County.

W. Va. Group to Aid Crippled Children

Charleston, W. Va., July 16 (Spl.). Organization of every county of West Virginia to care for crippled children is to be started immediately, according to officials of the West Virginia Society of Crippled Children, of which W. S. Johnson is president and executive secretary.

"Since the founding of the society through a legislative act in 1929, when $80,000 was appropriated," Johnson said, "900 crippled children have been cured and many others benefited by hospitalization."

In 1931 the Legislature increased the appropriation for hospitalization for crippled children in the State to $170,000 and in the 1923 session it was further increased to $180,000. At present 110 children are undergoing treatment at hospitals in Huntington, Wheeling, Martinsburg and Charleston. During the last month, diagnostic clinics were held at Bluefield, Buckhannon and Fairmont.

Two Escape Death From Lightning

Princess Anne, Md., July 16 (Spl.).—Mrs. Warren R. Pusey and daughter, Marcelle, narrowly escaped death today when a bolt of lightning entered the bedroom in which they were sleeping, cut the foot from the metal bed, burned Mrs. Pusey's foot and passed out another window. The room was wrecked. Mrs. Pusey suffered severe shock, but was otherwise uninjured.

Contest Seen For Democrats

Increase in Registration in Allegany County Draws Candidates.

Cumberland, Md., July 16 (Spl.). Heretofore permitting the primary election in Allegany County to go by default, the Democrats find they will have a contest in September with apparently plenty of action.

Since that party has gained in registration, pulling down the large Republican majority, it is probable that most of the nominations will be contested. Already two Democrats are seeking the nomination for sheriff. Paul Ritter, business man, who comes from a pioneer Democratic family and who has served as city collector, was the first to announce.

The other aspirant is Simon K. "Louie" Carroll. Mr. Carroll, who is also engaged in business, is a son of the late James P. Carroll, who served as State mining inspector and resided at Midland and Lonaconing before removing to Cumberland. This is Mr. Carroll's first effort for public office, although he has been an active party worker.

So far the only announced candidate for the Democratic nomination for State Senator is William Carl Richards, of the Allegany County bar, who started out as an anti-organization candidate, assuming the organization would fight him. It is reported now that the organization is likely to let Mr. Richards have the nomination without a contest.

Queen of Gypsies Dead in Baltimore

Brightly-Garbed, Body Lies in State at Home.

She died late yesterday at her home, where she had been taken after Dr. Walter Dandy, noted brain surgeon, performed a delicate operation on her at the Johns Hopkins Hospital.

Today she lay in state, garbed according to the Romany custom, is scores of gypsies and curious neighbors filed through the house. Her head was wrapped in a bright scarf and she wore a green shirtwaist decorated with silver and a long rose-colored dress.

Brought here weeks ago when she became ill, the Romany queen will be returned to Elizabeth, N. J., for burial. The services will be jointly celebrated by a priest and by Steve John, former king of the tribe. M. J. Frank, king of the tribe now, brought his wife to Baltimore when she became ill from a brain tumor.

Probably the largest convention of water works men ever held in West Virginia has been scheduled for August 22, 23 and 24 in this city when delegates from Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan and West Virginia will gather here to discuss various problems comfronting water works superintendents and filter plant operators.

It will be a joint meeting of the West Virginia Conference on Water Purification and the Central States section of the American Water Works Association.

Potato Shipment Allotments Made

Painter, Va., July 16 (Spl.).—The proration committee for the Delmarva Peninsula, in session here, has set the number of cars of potatoes that can be shipped from the Eastern Shore of Maryland and Virginia and Norfolk district.

Maryland, according to the committee ruling, can not ship more than 500 cars up to, and including Saturday, and Virginia, an equal amount. The maximum, however, for this period, is set at 3,000 for Norfolk district. Allotments include any potatoes bought by the Government.

Milk Control Plan Gains in Virginia Cities

Commission's Authority May Be Extended to More Communities.

Richmond, July 16 (AP).—Approximately 9,000 gallons of Virginia-produced milk moves into homes in three cities every day under the supervision of the Virginia Milk Commission. That, with other accomplishments, is the record of the State's new body, created under an act of the Legislature with the economic rehabilitation of the State's dairy industry as its aim.

Organized June 1, the commission has instituted its authority in Roanoke, Danville and Harrisonburg.

Six other communities have invited the commission to act in their respective areas. They are Waynsboro, Staunton, Petersburg, Hopewell, Newport News and Lynchburg. Hearings have been held and evidence gathered by the commission on conditions in each of those cities. Regulations are being drafted and will be released, the commission expects, by August 1.

Norfolk, Richmond, Charlottesville and Alexandria are still operating without intervention by the board. From Norfolk, however, there have been several inquiries and the spread of the commission's authority to that city is expected. Richmond has said that it is getting along nicely without the commission and has, so far, not invited the body to assume authority. Charlottesville is also satisfied under the present conditions, it seems.

The commission's control of the three markets already under regulation has stabilized prices, resulting in better prices to producers, more desirable business conditions for distributors and better service at reasonable prices to the consumer.

On the Roanoke market, where a price war had been raging, the commission set a 12-cent level for basic grade bottled milk and in Danville established the price at 13 cents. Milk had sold in Danville at 14 before the commission took over control of the market.

Cumberland Choir In Singing Contest

Cumberland, Md., July 16 (Spl.). The vested choir of Emmanuel Episcopal Church, this city, G. Walter Fisher, director, has entered the contest to be held at Mountain Lake Park, August 19, for church choirs of Maryland, West Virginia and Pennsylvania.

At least two other choirs of this city are prospective contestants and inquiries from the Tri-State territory indicate the greatest gathering of choirs in the history of the area.

The Rev. Felix G. Robinson, pastor of Trinity Lutheran Church, Keyser, W. Va., formerly of Oakland, Md., is general director of the choral festival and contest.

School Boards To Meet in W. Va.

Charleston, W. Va., July 16 (Spl.). W. W. Trent, State superintendent of schools, has issued a call for five special conferences to be held soon by boards of education to study school problems for the coming term.

The first of the meetings will be held July 23 at Romney for boards of Morgan, Jefferson, Hampshire, Pendleton, Berkeley, Mineral, Grant and Hardy Counties.

Other conferences will be held July 24 at Clarksburg, July 24 at New Martinsville, August 1 at Beckley and July 31 at Charleston. Trent says county school superintendents, assistant superintendents, principals and others interested in school problems will be invited to attend the conferences.

Veterans of War With Spain Meet

Ocean City, Md., July 16 (Spl.).—Organization of Ocean City Camp, United Spanish War Veterans, was effected at a meeting of over 50 Eastern Shore veterans of the Spanish-American War, the Boxer Rebellion and the Philippine Insurrection who assembled at the Atlantic Hotel convention hall here over the week-end.

Dr. Charles W. Purnell, Ocean City, was elected chairman of the group and Thomas B. Edwards, Salisbury, secretary and treasurer. Delegates from Caroline, Talbot, Dorchester, Wicomico, Somerset, Worcester Counties in Maryland and from Sussex County, Delaware, attended.

Speakers included John Edgar Rittenhouse, Baltimore, past department commander of Maryland U. S. W. V.; Lieut. William C. Gray, Salisbury; Frank C. Baugman, organizer of V. F. W. Post, No. 2931, at Ellendale, Del., and George N. Rendfrey, member at large of Georgetown, Del.

CCC to Transfer Large Fire Tower

Hagerstown, Md., July 16 (Spl.). An 80-foot fire tower will be erected this week on Lambs Knoll, 5 miles from Boonsboro on South Mountain, by CCC workers.

A 60-foot fire tower, which has been located at Thayersville, Md., is being moved to Lambs Knoll and an additional 20 feet will be added.

Because it is near the Washington to Cleveland airmail route, an airplane beacon will be placed on top. Otherwise, it was feared, the tower might become a menace to night fliers.

You're SURE before you taste

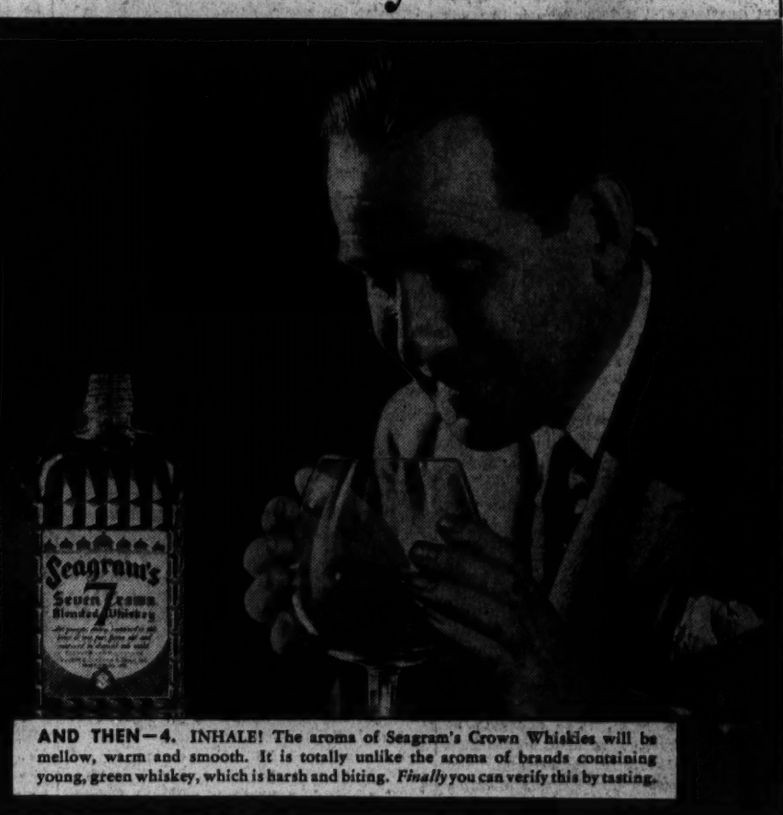

Make this test yourself

1. POUR OUT. Use an ordinary tumbler if aroma glass is not available. Swish around to moisten inside of glass.

2. POUR BACK into bottle. You are making the test professional tasters use for costliest whiskies.

3. WARM GLASS. Roll the glass between your palms. This heats the glass and causes aroma to rise.

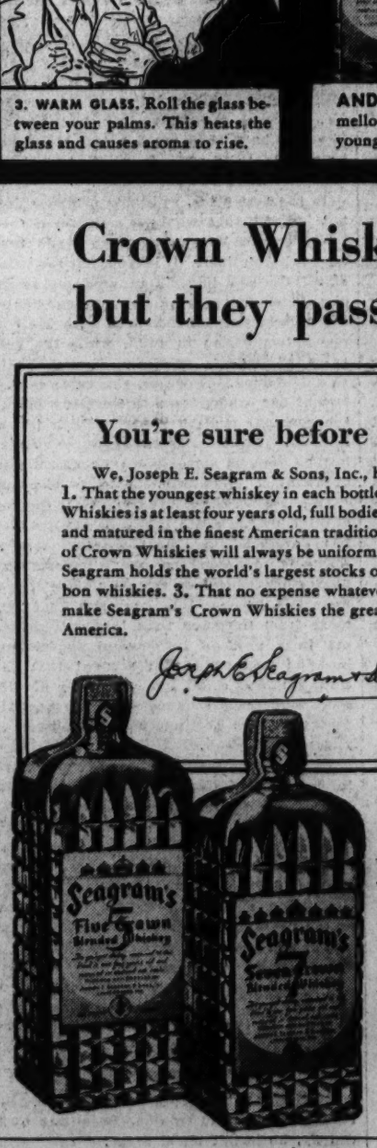

AND THEN—4. INHALE! The aroma of Seagram's Crown Whiskies will be mellow, warm and smooth. It is totally unlike the aroma of brands containing young, green whiskey, which is harsh and biting. Finally you can verify this by tasting.

You're sure before you buy

We, Joseph E. Seagram & Sons, Inc., hereby Guarantee 1. That the youngest whiskey in each bottle of Seagram's Crown Whiskies is at least four years old, full bodied, full flavor, distilled and matured in the finest American tradition. 2. That the quality of Crown Whiskies will always be uniform because the House of Seagram holds the world's largest stocks of aged Rye and Bourbon whiskies. 3. That no expense whatever has been spared to make Seagram's Crown Whiskies the greatest whiskey value in America.

Joseph E. Seagram & Sons Inc

Designed For Thinking.

Convincing evidence of increasing public interest in the issues underlying our contemporary problems comes from the University of Virginia, where the Institute of Public Affairs has just concluded its eighth annual session. A record-breaking attendance has listened to, and participated in, many discussions, ranging from an evaluation of the NRA to the purpose of monetary policy. But the range of discussion is less significant than the evolution in the theory of summer "institutes" which this one at Charlottesville has helped to bring about.

When, shortly after the war, the Institute of Politics was inaugurated at Williams College, its schedule was made to concentrate on interesting developments abroad. Eminent thinkers came there to lecture from all parts of the world. But there was often a sense of unreality about the discussions. They were more in the nature of a pretty intellectual exercise than a grappling with issues of vital concern to the participants.

At Charlottesville, from the outset, the problems of our own country have been made to predominate. Under the skillful leadership of Dr. Charles G. Maphis, as director, the Williamstown technique has been adapted to the understanding and the background of the average American. For that reason more and more people annually brave the heat of Virginia summer to study domestic problems in somewhat the same way as they were studied in the colonial period, the heydey of our political thinking. At the foot of Monticello, on a campus laid out by Thomas Jefferson, a procedure of discussion which is eminently American, and fundamentally vital to the operation of a democracy, has been successfully and happily revived.

Inconsistent Rail Policies.

While the chairman of the RFC has been trying to force a reduction in interest charges on loans to railroads, the Association of Railway Executives has been discussing ways and means to cover the heavy increases in expenditures which Administration policies have forced upon them. It is estimated that the carriers will have to disburse $66,000,000 under the terms of the recently enacted railway pension measure. Rising prices for materials and supplies are expected to add another $137,000,000 to their outlays and the restoration of pay cuts during the year will increase operating costs about $156,000,000. Thus the total addition to railway expenses resulting from acts of Congress and price-raising policies of the Administration is placed at approximately $359,000,000.

Faced by these great outlays for which no provision had been made, the roads are preparing to petition for a 10 per cent increase in freight rates. The necessity of finding more revenue is also emphasized by the carriers' failure to maintain the rapid improvement in earnings and in traffic which was in evidence during the early months of the year. Thus the dangers of bankruptcy and of increasing dependence of weak roads upon emergency credits have been heightened by the policies pursued. This is certainly an inauspicious prelude to the campaign to lower interest returns on railway obligations.

Meantime no progress has been made toward giving effect to the constructive recommendations of Coordinator Eastman, with a view to improving the position of the railroads in relation to competing transport agencies and enabling them to reduce costs through cooperation. Governmental generosity in making loans cheap for hard-pressed borrowers is not greatly appreciated when the pressure to borrow is due to acts of omission and commission by the Government itself.

In Defense Of Slowness.

Defending the Public Works Administration against charges that it has moved with "glacial slowness," Secretary Ickes has properly retorted that public works can not and should not be a slap-dash affair. As he says, "even an emergency does not justify uneconomic or wasteful public works construction." It is because of the inevitable waste incidental to any hasty development of public works planning, accompanied by lavish disbursement of funds, that reliance upon such projects to afford an escape from business depression seems hazardous.

Most economists would agree that governments can do a useful work in helping to stabilize employment by planning construction programs in advance of need, and developing them during periods when general business is slack. This kind of systematic long-time planning, however, is not expected to bring about widespread business recovery or provide a solution of an acute unemployment problem. Its objectives are modest, and the results are not spectacular.

Secretary Ickes has tried to apply some of the conservative principles that should govern public works programs of this type to the ambitious projects of the PWA. He should be congratulated for having offered resistance to efforts to force the pace of expenditures. As it is, waste and a great deal of misdirected expenditure can be expected from this public works agency, created in the midst of a great emergency and operating under political pressure to show results forthwith. It requires courage of a high order for the responsible head of such an organization to emphasize the truism that haste makes waste.

The General Strike.

There is a most disquieting thought for the American people in the fact that a situation like that now ruling in San Francisco can come to crisis with so little public understanding of what it is all about. That it demonstrates a thoroughly aroused and highly inflammable labor sentiment goes without saying. That the employers have done little to make concessions which seem reasonable to thousands of normally peaceful citizens is by the same token apparent. And that the Government—municipal, State or Federal—has signally failed to offer effective solution is equally apparent from the outcome.

Under the circumstances the question of whether communism is behind this general strike becomes somewhat academic. That the Communist party of the United States has been most active in urging the tactics now chosen goes without saying. For the general strike is the ideal agency whereby the capitalistic state can be "withered away," to use the phrase first employed by Engels and later closely analyzed by Lenin in his book on "The State and Revolution." Mass action of the type in operation in San Francisco has always been preached by Communists as the prelude to revolution. And it scarcely need be stated that every Communist in the country is now doing what he can to intensify and spread the fires there started.

But to realize that the situation at San Francisco is manna from heaven for the Communists is to advance no nearer to understanding of the causes behind this strike. Yet they are essentially simple. The original demands of the longshoremen all centered around better conditions of employment. And of these demands that which was most fundamental asked trade union control of the "hiring halls," where dock workers are taken on for the highly irregular work of loading and discharging steamship cargoes. After some weeks the shipping companies last month agreed to a system of joint control, but this in turn was rejected by the strikers because it did not promise the closed shop.

It was at this point that the Federal Government might profitably have made a very constructive suggestion, and it is to this point that negotiations for settlement will eventually have to return. There is no doubt that employer control of the hiring of stevedores leads to gross abuses of favoritism and racketeering, often exercised by foremen without employer knowledge. There is equally little doubt that complete trade union control of the supply of labor may, in extortionate hands, leave the employer completely at the mercy of his men. This being the case, there is no reason why the Government should not supervise the fair and efficient employment of longshoremen, in the best interests of both industrial partners.

This is what has been done, in one way or another, in both England and Germany, where the "decasualization" of dock workers began to be seriously tackled nearly half a century ago. It could be achieved, almost overnight, in this country if the United States Employment Service, combining Federal and State jurisdicton, would set itself seriously to the task. It could have been done, without any stir or reasonable opposition, long ago if 1 per cent of the time, and one-tenth of 1 per cent of the money, spent on the CWA had been used for a serious attack on certain basic industrial problems, instead of for postponement of such attack by establishment of wasteful and unscientific doles.

A proper and natural function of the state is organization of the "labor market," which is a problem external to any particular industry and often beyond the power of any industry to solve for itself. It is particularly a function of the state in an industry as inevitably irregular as is the loading and unloading of steamship cargoes.

In the enormous extension of State authority during recent months it is indeed strange that there has been so little advance consideration of where this policy will forward and where it will obstruct the smooth functioning of our civilization. Good may yet come out of the collapse at San Francisco if it turns the attention of the Government to the necessity of that system of public employment offices which has been made adequate to National needs in every industrial country except our own. The fact that this need has received so little public recognition is good evidence of the way we have permitted expensive generalities on "the more abundant life" to substitute for eradication of controllable evils.

Sea Fever.

I must down to the sea again,
To the lonely sea, and sky * * *

More boys than ever before are afflicted with sea fever, the Seaman's Church Institute in New York reports. From every part of the country they find their way to the seaboard, hoping that in some way or another they may find a place in one of the multitudinous ships that prowl the seas. But there are no jobs. Few ordinary seamen are wanted. And so the boys are sent home.

There is something sad about this, if one is inclined to be sentimental and recall the good old days when any adventurous lad could find himself a berth. But tears will do no good. The modern set-up is against the classic adventure. Steel ships use fewer men than did wood, and steam uses fewer than sail. The industrialization of the sea has been bemoaned by many, but it is an incontrovertible fact. Being a sailor is like being a factory hand. Even a union card is needed.

But boys dream of the sea, and seek the sea. They probably always will. The far horizon beckons, and the desire for a ship, and a tall mast, and a star to steer by will somehow never be denied, although the opportunity to realize it grows less and less. Of course there will, we hope, always be such vessels as the Nantucket Training Ship, that fits young men to be officers in the Merchant Marine, and the Navy will never have hard work to fill its ranks.

No matter how mechanized society may become, the sea's call will make itself heard. And, although we may hate to admit it, those lads who do find berths will feel themselves as romantic as their forebears who sailed stout ships around the Horn. For, poets and novelists to the contrary, romance does not lie in the beauty of the ship, but inside those who have imagination enough to feel that being a sailor, even on a liner, sets one apart from, and above, his fellow men.

Subordinating The Judiciary.

A special committee of the American Bar Association concerned with problems of administrative law has issued a very sober warning against the growing usurpation of judicial functions by the newly created Federal agencies to which Congress has delegated extensive legislative as well as executive powers.

The committee does not question the necessity of giving greater powers to executive agencies. It does protest vigorously against the issuance of an incomprehensible mass of rules and regulations by these agencies. In one year, it states, "the NRA has issued 10,000 or more pages of pronouncements supposedly having the effect of law, a total which exceeds the volume of all Federal statutes."

The lawyers who object to the excessive powers vested in this and other emergency organizations can not be accused of a desire to make political capital out of their careful analysis. Their views are the considered results of prolonged study, not shallow partisan denunciation.

For that reason close public attention should be given to the assertion that "Federal administrative agencies, exercising judicial in combination with legislative and executive functions, are obliterating essential lines of our Government structure." And when the Bar Association committee adds that these same agencies are substituting a "labyrinth in which the rights of individuals, while preserved in form, can easily be nullified in practice," it sounds an alarm which reinforces the warnings uttered by Senator Borah and other thoughtful critics of the New Deal.

The committee has done an especially useful service in emphasizing the powerlessness of the individual to protect his constitutionally guaranteed rights, when the mass of laws and of regulations having the force of law is too complex to be understood. Simplification of the machinery of government is recommended, such as a transfer of independent agencies to the main executive departments of government and changes designed to deprive Federal administrative bodies of judicial powers. These reforms, however, are admittedly matters for future determination.

The immediate value of the report lies in its unemotional and expert analysis of trends which must be reversed if the rights of the citizens are not to be "nullified in practice," by subjection of the courts to the control of administrative tribunals armed with judicial power.

Our Trade With Germany.

Recent rapid declines in the value of our exports to Germany have been cited by the Assistant Secretary of Commerce as proof that the United States is suffering from the effect of exclusive trade agreements which Berlin has negotiated with other countries. For example, Mr. Dickinson points out that our exports to Germany fell to $6,847,000 in May as compared with $15,728,000 in January, and an average monthly total of nearly $12,000,000 in 1933. Bad as this record undoubtedly is, it is doubtful whether Mr. Dickinson is justified in intimating that it would have been much better if we had been able to engage in tariff bargaining negotiations at an earlier date.

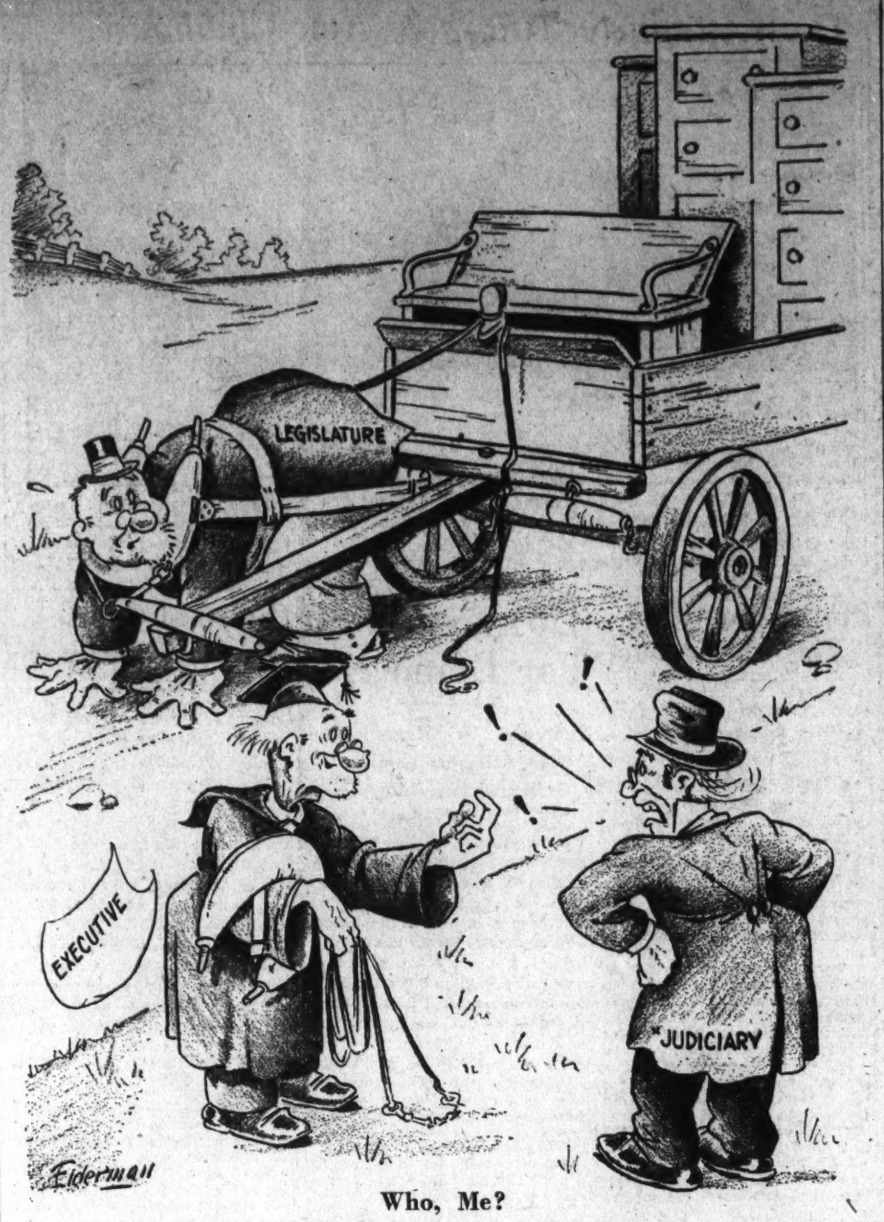

In the first place, available evidence does not indicate that we have suffered a relatively greater loss of German trade than have other nations. It is true that the value of all German imports in gold marks increased slightly during the first quarter of the present year as compared with the corresponding period in 1933, while the gold value of imports from the United States alone declined. However, the value in dollars of our export trade to Germany during the past five months is higher than it was in 1933. Comparisons are of course vitiated by the interim devaluation of the dollar, of which Mr. Dickinson makes no mention.

In any case, the latest trade statistics are affected by the acute exchange crisis which has developed in recent months, forcing Germany to curtail necessary imports and place embargoes upon certain classes of raw materials. Then, too, countries that buy more from Germany than they sell to her are in a position to demand concessions both on trade and debt account that the United States could not expect to obtain. Since our trade balance with Germany is favorable, our position as a bargainer is strategically weak.

Ultimately, of course, Germany may have to make concessions, according us as favorable treatment as that given other countries, since the United States supplies her with cotton and other essential raw materials. For the present, however, the exchange difficulties that Germany is encountering afford a sufficient explanation of the recent sharp shrinkage in the value of German purchases of American goods.

If the United States coins a 3-cent piece, this will be the worst thing that has happened to the church in years.

You will not develop your faculties by running away from trouble. Because a bird can fly, he hasn't much sense.

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

"Seedtime and Harvest."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The crucial issue of the moment, in some minds, seems to be one between "initiative and individualism, which flowered so well in the soil of America," and "a horde of bureaucrats who will do our thinking and planning for us." Such is the wording of a number of strikingly similar communications to the press recently.

How much "thinking and planning" has really been done "for us" by these exemplars of "initiative and individualism" which has "flowered" so well? The writer was born and raised in New York City and for over 50 years has kept fairly accurate record of this "flowering" process. No one can object to a flowering initiative and individualism provided it does not smell to heaven of greed and graft. Any public library will tell the story of that economic flower-show in these United States, and, from the standpoint of human rights, it is anything but beautiful. It is even common knowledge that Government here has been for generations the tool of private bureaucracies, and that the lobbies of these thinkers and planners have had as much concern for all the people as a hyena has for a partridge.

What the people need now is not isolated beds of economic nosegays, but the full harvest of that which is their own; and it is not at all likely that they are going to take expert advice on how to get that harvest from discredited gardeners. Neither are the people of this country going to abdicate their sovereignty, and it is childish, to put it mildly, to try to scare them into thinking that they already have done so. H. B. S.

National Roof-Repairs.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The economic roof of America has had several rather serious leaks in its 150 years of existence.

Heretofore we have held to the regular method of calling in an experienced roofer to fix the roof. This time we are approached by a man who plainly tells us all he has is an idea, and says he will fix it so that it will stay fixed—but refuses to give us a guarantee. He is a smiling and agreeable fellow, so we give him the job.

When he starts to work, he says: "What is wrong is your foundation." And he still smiles—and I smile with him. He started over a year ago. The roof still leaks, and he already has so many obstructions in the substructure that we have decided that if he does not stop the leak there will be no room to live right under the roof. J. M. D.

Men and Machines.

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: Despite the New Deal there are still about 9,000,000 unemployed. This, to a great extent, is due to machine-made unemployment. It already existed during the fabulous Coolidge Era.

Here are five instances which illustrate the influence of machinery upon the labor market: The displacement of theater-musicians by the talkies; one steam shovel displaces 500 hand workers in digging iron ore; seven men cast as much pig-iron as 60 men a decade ago; two men replace 128 men in unloading pig-iron; and in a machine shop 30 employes with new machines do the work of 220 workers with old machines.

All this was pointed out as early as 1928. It also explains why technocracy created such a stir about a year and a half ago. Mr. Roosevelt certainly has his work cut out for him. F. V.

Dog Gone!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It was a relief that someone put you straight on raspberries. During this period of rest from legislation, it is well to settle some of these really vital questions.

The thing that disturbs my sense of fitness more than all else is "Cap" Stubb's dog. Now, I made the acquaintance of "Cap" and his dog Tippy several years ago in the Middle West. I have no definite information as to when he first joined The Post family. But since meeting him here, and renewing acquaintance, I am perturbed because he has the wrong dog. Same cap, same trousers, same grandmother, same chum, same Aggie, but the wrong dog. The boys have traded dogs. That is a nature-faker worse than raspberries. The impossibility of two boys trading dogs is exceeded only by the impossibility of two dogs trading boys.

No sir! That smooth-haired dog with one black ear is named Tippy, and his rightful owner is "Cap" Stubbs. Many a time have I seen him sitting on the grandmother's lap—what there is of it—while she tried to read the paper. Yes, sir!

Epic Of A Class

(A review of "Escape From the Soviets" by Edna Kenton in The Nation.)

If you are looking for an example in support of the dictum that really "fine writing" is natural writing, you can do no better among current books than to offer Tatiana Tchernavin's "Escape from the Soviets." A more unpretentious, simple story has seldom come any reader's way. If a book is a bridge over the gulf that separates reader from author, this book is a bridge so delicate as to eliminate both bridge and gulf. Here the reader sits eye to eye with the speaker—the veritable teller of the tale. If he has an ounce of sensitiveness, he can hear the voice itself of the narrator; quiet, controlled, exquisitely just in its emphasis, disattached from the personal in a way that makes this story the epic of a class—unless we employ new Russia's term and say "category"—of people. Somehow, here, all the difficulties of translation seem overcome, and we listen to a story common to all mankind.

Common, that is, to all mankind when in the throes of revolution. And its tone should make for the reader's attempt to catch this author's point of view. She never seems to forget—nor ever have had to remember—that revolution is always revolution, and so never—whatever the aim of its leaders—free from cruelty, injustice, stupidity, with unimaginable horrors a part of each day's work.

The story begins with the birth of her son in 1918. "The revolution as such," she says on her first page, "did not frighten me. I was brought up in a very liberal professional family and felt convinced that the overthrow of the autocracy would lead to real political freedom." Her husband was a scientist—both of the intelligentsia, the simple class source of all their later woes.

For 12 years—until 1930—the Tchernavins contrived to exist by way of their professions. Mme. Tchernavin, forced out of teaching when her schools were disbanded, took charge, first of the Pavlovsk Palace Archives, and then, under the NEP regime, became assistant curator of the Hermitage Museum at Leningrad. By 1930, the intelligentsia were doomed as "counter-revolutionists" to "save the face" as the Chinese put it. Tchernavin was arrested first and later convicted and exiled. "And what shall I do all by myself, mother?" the 12-year-old child asked, when Mme. Tchernavin's arrest seemed imminent. "Go to school. Wait for me. Take food to daddy and me in prison—you know there's no one else to do it," was the mother's reply. In March, 1931, she was arrested and held till the following August.

In the book there is a map, "showing route of escape" from Kem, where Tchernavin was a prisoner, to Finland. The 13-year-old boy had bought one, on first word of their getting permission to visit his father. The rest of the story is the journey to Kem, and "escape from the Soviets." The plan, the delay, and the action—which covered three weeks. Long flight of the hunted from the hunters, with compass lost at the start, the father fallen ill with a bad heart, the boy crippled with an abscessed foot, and, finally, mother and son left in the forest, while the father labored on toward Finland. Not a word of heroics, but a fresh, new saga of human courage!

The "enemies of Russia" will like this book, and the sentimentalists likewise. But it is not written by "an enemy of Russia;" nor, above all, by a sentimentalist. The exposure is stark, and carries truth in every line. It is straightly addressed to every true friend of Russia within and without the Soviets.

A Hitler Prototype.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A daring stand and a timely warning characterize your editorial, "What Hitler Says to Us." If the German people could see the "petty, ignorant, muddle-headed little egoist," as you have unmasked him, it would be well for the future of the world. To your description might be added Hitler's resemblance to Giuseppe Balsamo, who in the eighteenth century masqueraded as Count Alessandro Cagliostro, and by the practice of "alchemy" raised himself to temporary power and affluence. Cagliostro finally fell foul of the Holy Inquisition at Rome. Ultimately Hitler will fall foul of an even more powerful agency, Public Opinion.

A Case for Capital.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Capitalism vs. socialism: one industrializes while the other pauperizes a nation. Capital is the fountainhead of all progress. We are skeptical when we are asked to risk our gold in new untried experiment. Columbus was inspired, but experienced great difficulty in trying to prove that the world is round. And so with other ideas and imaginations. Think of the thousand and one things that have benefited us through initiative and inventive genius, yet which would have been impossible without the aid of capital. Somehow or other as the population increases, new ideas and inventions are provided to absorb the increased population by turning laborers into mechanics, and to professional, business and financial vocations. What we need now is more labor-saving devices to absorb the present unemployed and make room for the coming generation, and so on and so on, keeping up the march of progress. The Lord will provide. There are many more wonderful things in store for us. Were it not for capital, we would all be laborers without the many blessings that the good Lord has bestowed upon us.

The Post Impressionist

Amaryllis In the Shade

Postoffice, Tuesday.

IN all this complaint against city noises, there is, it emerges, one sort of person whose sensibilities have been neglected. For it appears that there is one sort of person who likes city noises.

* * *

To us he became vocal, or visible, only the other day. He appealed in a letter dated last Monday and written from Washington, where he seems now to be resident. He avers that he is by birth and upbringing a citizen of those great open spaces where the West continues—and continues—and continues. In fact, he signs himself "A Texas Hay-Shaker."

* * *

"This morning," he writes, "I was quite amused upon reading your column. I mean the column refering to the noises of your—I may now say our—fair City of Washington, as well as the noises of certain other cities.

"You mentioned the shrieks of the sirens of Washington ambulances and fire-engines. Surely you have never been in the lovely town of Houston, Tex."

* * *

Well, we haven't. Houston "constitutes" one of the sins of omission in our peripatetic education. But we are glad to repair it now—under the Hay-Shaker's guidance.

* * *

"Truly there," says he, "is a city of sirens—and many, many of them. They are heard long and continuously: for 24 hours of the day. It would seem that every call for an ambulance is broadcast in Houston, and that there is a merry race and chase to see just which one of these vehicles can arrive first. Theirs is the first sound that one hears upon making an entry into Houston—and the last sound that one hears upon his departure."

* * *

But, neither literally nor metaphorically, does Hay-Shaker remain in Houston. He returns to Washington, and wanders thence still farther afield:

"For me, the incessant pounding of car-wheels over switches and rail-crossings is the sole disturbing sound in the Capital," Hay-Shaker avers. "New York's characteristic is the rattle and bang from elevated trains that grate so harshly upon one's ears. And San Francisco ranks high as a clamorous burg with the mighty clang and clatter of its cable-cars."

* * *

Having divested himself of which observations—made before the general strike struck San Francisco—our correspondent turns to the case of that forgotten man of whom we spoke when we began to quote his letter:

"But, after all," he writes, "why worry over these noises? All of them are essential to any city. When one gets deep into the country, such auditory disturbances are extinguished—and then they would be welcome music to the ears."

* * *

This, mind you, from a man born and brought up in Texas: not the Texas of Houston, but the Texas, we gather, of Pecos County, or the sources of the San Saba! Is all love of quiet—at least of rural quiet—a pose?

* * *

Oddly enough, most of the printed praise of rustic peace has been written by men who preferred to pass urban lives:

Theocritus, if we can believe a famous reference in the "Idylls," was a citizen of Syracuse. Virgil, born on a farm, went to Rome to finish the "Eclogues." There was Politian, founder of the dramatic pastoral, a professor at the University of Florence; Honore d'Urfe, a hanger-on at the Court of Savoy. Tasso's most charming work is not his heroics; it is his bucolic bits, but Tasso was reared in Naples, lived in Rome, in Padua, in Venice—lived anywhere save in the country. We don't know the habitual habitat of Portuguese-Spanish Montemayor, but we suspect that it was a city, too.

* * *

Study also the tradition in English literature:

"Arcadia"—but Sir Philip Sidney was a courtier. "The Shepherd's Calendar"—but Spencer was really a town man. So was Ben Jonson, however well he wrote "The Sad Shepherd." Lyly's "Gallathea," Peele's "Arraignment of Paris," Greene's "Never Too Late;" they were all the work of men who, when they were not cosmopolitan, were at least metropolitan.

Milton sang of sporting

"With Amaryllis in the shade,
Or with the tangles of Neaera's hair;"

Yet Milton was just then only taking a dig at old Buchanan, who, Milton thought, was too well along in years to write about such ladies—and Milton, born a cockney, remained a cockney to the last, Matthew Arnold's "Scholar Gypsy" is one long longing for the country by a poet who could never have been happy away from town for three weeks on end.

* * *

"But, anyhow," Richard Jarvis demanded, when we showed him Hay-Shaker's letter, "while these city reformers are suppressing city noises, why doesn't some Rural Rehabilitation Committee go out after the noises of the country? You say you can't get to sleep early in the city because of the fire-engines? You can't get to sleep early in the country because of the radio. You say you can't sleep late in the city because of the street cars? You can't sleep late in the country because of the roosters.

"I'm just back in Washington after three weeks at the seashore. I didn't get a single good night's rest all that time. The ocean must have started in making a noise before my arrival. Anyhow, it was going strong when I drove up, and—believe it or not—it never quit for breath once while I was there. So far as I can make out, it's as likely as not to keep up its swish-boom-swish forever."

Carlisle Bargeron

The Spirit of America.

When the august gentlemen of the Pulitzer prize committee again get together I hope they don't overlook the editor of the Bristol (Va.-Tenn.) Herald. There, to my mind, is a man who has caught the spirit of our country and in a few succinct phrases has given expression to it.

BARGERON

In a recent editorial he importunes Senator Harry Byrd to get right with the Administration so Virginia can get its hands in the feed trough. He sees no hope through Carter Glass, he says, because Glass has gone too long adhering to his principles. But Byrd is younger, he points out with irresistible logic, and should be able to adapt himself. There is no need for a man in the full flush of life to let principles stand in the way, the editor argues. And if he keeps up his opposition to the Administration Virginia is bound to suffer. In the big grab-bag, it will be the loser.

There, I say, is an editor who lives close to his people.

• • • • •

The liberals would say of this gentleman that he has kept abreast of the times. There is none of the Neanderthal man about him. He is living in the present; not in the past. He is a Progressive, the sort from which progress comes. No hanging back and complaining as the parade passes on the part of this editor. No captious criticism of men who are trying so hard to give us things. His not to reason why. Says he simply: "Just give me mine."

How different is he from those editors who are decrying our expenditures, who keep telling their readers that such an orgy can't possibly go on, who would like to see the States again assume some of their responsibilities. He is the very man for Gen. Johnson! He sees clean through the woods. And how!

• • • •

The trouble with our editors, I think, is that they get out of touch with the folks. How can they tell what people are thinking, and in turn give expression to their thought unless they get out amongst them, meet with them in their assemblies of the corner drug store or in their community gathering places? They can't feel the pulse of our country in cloistered editorial sanctums.

So it has remained for the Bristol editor to sum up in a few words that intangible thing we call our spirit. He has somewhow caught up a handful of the great ebb and flow of our National tide, grasped the heart from the rapidly moving current of our National life.

Get, says he, what you can from the Federal Government.

I don't know whether Senator Byrd will heed his advice or not. They have a pretty strong tradition of State rights and responsibilities down in Virginia. It is out-moded, reactionary and born of a desire to return to the dark past, of course. But a people so steeped in tradition find it rather difficult to get out.

At any rate, this editor's words will be heeded by the generations coming on. The youth of the country will profit by them even if the oldsters are too set in their ways to embrace the new deal. There is no reason why they should not be trained, not in the arts or the professions as in the past, but in the highly technical pursuit of getting something from the Federal Government.

• • • •

There is a question, however, as to whether the editor's contention that unless Byrd does get right his State will be denied its share of the pie, is well founded. Only the other day, in fact, I saw where the Federal Government was just itching to relieve Virginia of a responsibility.

A man down there is being held in connection with the death of a woman. The usual charge would be murder. It is strictly a State case and the State authorities seem to need no assistance whatsoever. But the Department of Justice can't keep out of it to save its life. Under an act of the last Congress, its jurisdiction was greatly extended in the matter of kidnapings. So they want to make a kidnaping case of this.

Exclusion of newspaper advertisements as evidence in the trial examination of charges of price discrimination was protested yesterday by the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. in a brief filed with the Federal Trade Commission, the Associated Press reported.

The advertisements appeared in the Cleveland Press and the Youngstown (Ohio) Daily Vindicator.

The brief asserted the exclusion by the trial examiner prevented the commission from getting "a sound view of the facts, which the commission will desire to consider before handing down a decision."

Arguments on the brief are expected today.

Democrats Woo Strip Of Western States

By Robert C. Albright.

A CORRIDOR of Democratic States, dividing Eastern and Western United States and splitting the Republican party geographically.

Prominent Republican leaders here yesterday visualized this picture as an object of Democratic campaign strategy, and a cue to the Roosevelt swing toward Progressivism.

It was learned that a dominant element in the Republican party for months has been working to head off just such a development yet believes the Democratic maneuver has an outside chance of succeeding.

A leading Republican conceded that Roosevelt declarations for Senator Robert W. La Follette, jr., in Wisconsin, and Senator Bronson Cutting, in New Mexico, might all but accomplish this Democratic highway from North to South, through the West.

Dividing Corridor States Outlined.

STATES comprising the dividing "corridor" presumably would include Minnesota, Wisconsin, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma and New Mexico, it was said.

"Such a Democratic path through the West might have more than geographic significance," one responsible Republican said. "The element of political contagion would have to be met and coped with."

Wisconsin Republicans, already having broken away in a third-party movement, party leaders were known to be concentrating on New Mexico, in an effort to break this link in the chain.

While the potential "corridor" through the West would not be solidly Democratic, one source pointed out that the chain might be reinforced by such Administration sympathizers as Senator Henrik Shipstead, Minnesota Farmer-Laborite; Senator George Norris, Nebraska Republican, and even the progressive-minded Arthur Capper, of Kansas.

This colorful sidelight developed as Republican Senatorial and Congressional committees prepared to open headquarters in the East and West as bases for campaign operations.

It was learned that previous plans for each of the three Republican committees to finance its own activities had been abonded. The National Republican campaign committe instead will be the sole clearing house for campaign collections and disbursement of funds.

Generals Watching Work On Atlantic Seaboard.

WATCHING out for New England and the Atlantic Seaboard for the Republican Senatorial committee will be Senator Daniel O. Hastings, of Delaware, assisted by Senators W. Warren Barbour, of New Jersey, and Wallace H. White, jr., of Maine. Eastern headquarters will be in New York City.

Senator L. J. Dickinson will be in charge of Chicago headquarters. Assisting him in pressing the Republican campaign in the Middle West and the Mississippi Valley will be Senators Gerald P. Nye, of North Dakota, and Senator Capper. Republican interests in the Intermountain and Pacific States will be watched by Senators Frederick Steiwer, of Oregon, and Robert D. Carey, of Wyoming.

It was authoritatively learned there will be no effort to harmonize some cleavage within Republican ranks over issues, but instead campaign capital will be made of each man's views in sections where they are generally shared.

Thus Republican campaigners who believe the whole New Deal philosophy of Government should be scrapped, and others who are willing to accept some few Administration reforms, would be given free reign in campaigning for what their views are worth.

U.S. Agent Held For Grand Jury Quiz in Slaying

Mother of Four Children Killed in Hunt for Machine Gun.

St. Louis, July 16 (A.P.).—Grand jury investigation into the fatal shooting in her bed of Mrs. Dessie Masterson was ordered today after a corner's verdict found Lear B. Reed, department of justice agent, criminally careless in the death.

Witnesses who testified at a dramatic inquest into death of the woman, mother of four children, related that the unsuccessful raid on the Masterson flat Friday night resulted from a false tip that a machine gun used in the slaying of John C. Johnson, colored kidnap witness, was in the home.

Reed, department of justice head in this area, did not testify. He was released on the $5,000 bond posted Saturday when police arrested him for "investigation." Harry Newbold, deputy sheriff likewise arrested and released on mond, was not named by the corner's jury.

Circuit Attorney Franklin Miller said that the most serious charge which could be brought against the Federal agent would be one of manslaughter, based on culpable negligence.

Subpoenas were served on all witnesses to appear before the grand jury Thursday afternoon.

Following the raid, Reed explained that he fired several shots through the door of the Masterson flat after he believed he heard firing inside the building. The Masterson family had lived in the flat only three days.

Harry Masterson, husband of the slain woman, leaned from the witness stand today and pointed out Reed as the officer who struck him with a gun butt, knocking him over his wife's body, as the officers gained entrance to the house. Mrs. Masterson had been sleeping with a 9-year-old daughter.

Masterson, an unemployed laborer, said there were no weapons in his flat and that he did not immediately open the door at the shouts of officers "because this is a bad neighborhood and I thought you were gangsters."

Politics Seen Behind College

Older Men Use Students as Catspaws, Nevada Editor Charges.

Reno, Nev. (U.P.).—Politicians seeking to advance their own ends have stirred unrest among so-called pacifist groups in undergraduates of American colleges it was charged here by William F. McMenimin, editor of the Sagebrush, weekly newspaper of the University of Nevada.

He declared recent demonstrations on the part of "pacifists" were "directed by the Student League of Industrial Democracy, the National Student League and other sympathetic organizations."

"These organizations are not led by students but by propagandists, experienced politicians much older than college students with motives in mind other than the good of the college movement.

"Through the spread of propaganda," McMenamin continued, "in the form of letters to editors of student newspapers, the forming of student groups to pledge against war and by sending out countless pamphlets to students, these men hope to mold student opinion to their own ends.

"They hope to make students' minds a putty which they can mold into a tool with which to fight political battles, against the military factions of the country. Many students are duped into believing this propaganda. . . ."

McMenamin condoned the riots staged by students in various Eastern institutions. He described the disturbances as "futile demonstrations."

State Compacts Sought to Aid War on Crime

(Associated Press.)

A movement to place anticrime compacts before the 40-odd State Legislatures to meet in January, in keeping with the Ashurst-Sumners law passed by the last Congress, was started yesterday at General Federation of Women's Clubs headquarters.

William Stanley, Assistant to the Attorney General, outlined the plan to a group representing many organizations interested in crime prevention. He told of problems confronting the Department of Justice.

He contended this country needed no Scotland Yard, but did need the closest cooperation between States in preventing crime such as kidnaping.

Records at the department, Stanley said, show the Attorney General's statement that more criminals than enlisted men are armed is "not only true but modest."

He mentioned cases in which prominent citizens of communities had sought out the Attorney General in an effort, not to apprehend criminals in their communities, but to get them clemency.

Elaborating on the plan of the Attorney General for a comprehensive crime conference here in November, he said a central agency might be created to study how to handle youths.

Another suggestion was the setting up in Washington of a bureau to which a governor may come and compare his crime prevention system with those of other States.

Stanley said suggestions for anticrime compacts included covering the pursuit of a criminal across State lines, serving of processes by officers of one State on a fugitive in another, return of fugitives and parole violators.

Transient Bureau Cases Given FERA

Fredericksburg Unit Will Shut Down Aug. 1.

Fredericksburg, Va., July 16 (Spl.).—Transfer of cases from the Federal Transient Relief Bureau here to the Federal Emergency Relief Administration began today after announcement that the local transient unit would be discontinued after August 1.

Miss Margaret Padgett, director of the bureau, will be transferred to the transient relief office at Norfolk, Va.

Prevalence of "one-night" transients rather than actual needy destitute families was given as the reason for closing the local office. It will be reopened if the need of deserving persons become apparent.

No End of Books

By

Theodore Hall

Back to Methuselah.

SINCE this column is going to report tomorrow on a couple of sadly foreboding books about the European tinder-heap, I think it high time to dip into the well at once and haul up something of a more reassuring nature.

THEO. HALL

The truth is I'm nervous as a wet hen. Europe, I read, is going to go up in flames the minute after next—and just before I reason that 3,000 miles of ocean will utterly cool that heat for us. I remember that every American had the same confidence over his breakfast-table paper in August, 1914. Nor do the flash head-lines from San Francisco and Minneapolis cause me exactly to caper. Perhaps the last straw is the news that my home town of Ashtabula, Ohio, which I had always thought a model of solid business propriety, is experiencing more labor trouble than any other place of its size in the country. The cumulative effect of all this, as the French say, "gives me furiously to think."

So the bucket dips down and comes up with the notion, no! a whit new or novel, not a whit undiscussed, that we'd all better go back to the land. Give me five acres, a small house with a tight roof, a wood-pile, a well in the back yard—and I'll be very pleased, thank you, to read in the papers (if they're still publishing papers in those unforseeable days) all about the Emperor of Europe and Eastern America. I exaggerate, of course. But I also propound you the immortal words of Old Bill. "If you know a better 'ole, go to it!"

One has only to mention this wish to go back to the bean row and hen yard, back to the landed patriarchy, back, in short, to Mathuselah, and the criticisms come flying and bumping like June-bugs. "Mere romantic escape!" cries one school—to which I don't agree in the slightest. "A machine civilization can't possibly retrogress unless it first dissolves," says another—and to that fact I am forced to agree. But until something superbureaucratic and sensible is done for 100,000 farmers who specialize in wheat and who can't grow any this summer, and for 200,000 coal miners who can never possibly be employed in their mines, I shall still presume to see a grain of virtue in the garden patch. A man can at least eat, and that as Napoleon would have said, is something.

But I must confess that this rather odd nostalgia to arise in an urban breast (I wouldn't know an ear of Golden Bantam) from an ear of pop-corn!) is the result of a deep innoculation of Stuart Chase's magnificent book called "Mexico." (It came out first in 1931; now Macmillan has issued it in a dollar edition with all the original Diego Rivera pen drawings.) If you have been following his extremely interesting articles in The Sunday Post, and have formed a taste for his vigorous style, you will enjoy this book heartily.

Fresh from writing two surveys of the industrial scene around us, Mr. Chase went down into Mexico and found another world, an America to which we in the "Colossus of the North" are but parvenu cousins. It was a civilization descended direct from the Mayas and Aztecs (whose height of glory made the rest of the world at the time look like the backwoods—their engineering, crafts, astronomy, and medicine were superb, their government extraordinary, and for 1,500 years before 900 A. D. they did not know what war was), a civilization based on the land, without machines, without the dead, dry work we know, and without worry.

Today the Mexican, except in the big cities, enjoys perfect economic security. A holiday on the average of every one day in three (where among us are the shades of technocracy's vaunted 20-hour week?) shows how little he has to work for that security. Moreover, what he produces is a function of himself, wrought for his own peace or happiness or creative expression—it is not a drive for cash to "keep up with the Joneses."

Impossible and distant as we know that whole scene to be for us, there are many suggestions implicit in Mr. Chase's text which remain practicable for a back-to-Methuselah movement. Back? Why should a grip on a good life be called "backward?"

• • • •

Toward the definition of a "good life," toward the thousand and one problems of an individual in a society pretty well packed with other individuals, one should advance with a certain coolness of perspective.

Nothing better for the purpose exists than a study of sociology, the art of living among mankind. Let me recommend as an antidote for the mental jitters a volume called "Sociology" (Macmillan, $2.50)—a college text in a subject of which we should all be students. Prof. Emory S. Bogardus, of the University of California, steps neatly and nimbly among every topic pertaining to social groups, defining, clarifying and balancing. One does not ask such a work to solve the problems—it is enough to have them presented clearly, in a broader perspective than most of us can attain. Long lists of extra reading will prove useful to anyone desiring to follow a special topic, anything from the family to movies, from eugenics to crime.

But if one really wants to "escape," one can take up yoga. Miss Geraldine Coster, who wrote "Psycho-analysis for Normal People," gives us in the pages of "Yoga and Western Psychology" (Oxford University Press, $2), an ingenious comparison of the two systems. The ancient "yoga sutras of Patanjali," the least odd of the various species of yoga, seems to have proclaimed many truths of the human personality a long time before our psycho-analysts "discovered" them. Miss Coster almost turned me into a yogi.

Or one can take up photography. William M. Strong writes an excellent little booklet on the hobby: "Photography for Fun" (Leisure League of America, 25 cents). It is frank, authoritative, and amusing—a good book for beginners.

Or one can read Thucydides. The Modern Library this month has issued his "Complete Writings" (95 cents)—the famous history of the Peloponnesian War.

But the description by the "first and greatest critical historian" of the fierce and suicidal battling between Athens and Sparta, 431-411 B. C., reminds me too unpleasantly of our own time. Does anyone know where I can find a tidy little farm, cheap?

HOW TO OPERATE A MOTOR CAR.

(As seven out of ten drivers seem to understand.)

Starting the Car.

Take your position in the automobile. Turn on the ignition. Press the starter. Blow the horn. Does the horn sound all right? Blow it again to make certain of the right adjustment. Nothing is more embarrassing than to start an auto trip and find the horn inadequate.

Backing Out of the Garage.

Throw out the clutch, slip the gears into reverse, release the clutch gently and blow the horn.

Deciding on Trip.

Before starting in any definite direction, it is well to decide on the trip. The thing to do at this point is throw out the clutch, leave the gears in neutral and blow the horn.

Starting on Trip.

Having decided on destination, blow the horn, put the gear shift into low speed and blow the horn. After the car has picked up headway, shift into second and blow the horn. Now shift into high and blow the horn. You are now en route.

To Make a Right-Hand Turn.

To Make a Left-Hand Turn.

Turn left at high speed with a blank stare. Blow the horn.

To Come to a Quick Stop in Traffic.

At an Open Drawbridge.

Many automobilists do not seem to know what to do when they suddenly encounter an open drawbridge or one that is just closing. It is very simple. Put the car into neutral and transfer your foot from the accelerator to the button controlling the horn.

When Encountering a Traffic Jam.

All motorists know how heartbreaking it is to be on a Sunday trip going no place in particular for no good reason at 50 miles an hour and find themselves obliged to slow down to 30 miles by some congestion just ahead. This congestion is generally due to the fact some fellow is having motor trouble, of taking a nervous grandmother out for a ride, or has run out of gas or something. To solve all his troubles, clear up the congestion and relieve the general tension, place the index finger on the electric horn and keep it there until the finger becomes numb.

Passing Hospitals, Schools, Homes.

Blow the horn.

(Note—Write for one of our souvenir booklets on lip reading and its importance in interpreting what taxi drivers say out of the sides of their mouths.)

You Lose if You Fool Your Host by Pretending to Eat

By Robert Quillen

When a certain freshman came home for the Christmas holidays, his father called him into his office for a conference.

"My son," said the old man, "when I was your age I had to work hard for every nickel I got. My poverty was a great handicap. And I therefore resolved to make life easier for you if I could.

"Last year my chance came—or, rather, your chance. I saved the life of an Indian prince who is fabulously rich.

"In his domain there is a river whose sands are almost pure gold, and he permits his friends to work the sand and bring out a fortune.

"The only restrictions are that each man must depend on his own exertions and pan the gold in the old-fashioned way. He can not hire another to work for him or use labor-saving methods.

"I figured you could pan enough gold in four years to make you rich. I say four years because the prince limits each man to that period. But he doesn't limit the amount of gold you may take out, and some men work night and day to get as much as possible. I don't blame them, for I would do the same thing myself.

"But you wouldn't. I have been watching you, and I have learned, to my great disappointment, that it would be a waste of money to send you over there.

"I know what you would do. With all of that gold there for the taking, you would make no effort to get it. You would make a pretense of washing the sand, but you wouldn't try to get the gold out of it. And though you would be cheating nobody but yourself, you would think it smart to get by and make the others think you were panning as much gold as anybody. In the end you would bring out a few bags of worthless sand to fool the prince. It is hard to believe, but it is true. So I'm not sending you."

"Aw, hooey!" said the freshman. "I don't believe a word of it. But if it was on the level, I wouldn't be that dumb. What makes you think I'd be crazy enough to pass up a chance like that?"

"Well," said the old man, "knowledge is gold. And your school report shows you are trying to avoid getting your share of it."

Krol Bond Forfeit Under Advisement

Judge Reserves Decision; Illness Claimed.

Winchester, Va., July 16 (Spl.).—After hearing evidence tending to substantiate the claim that Max Krol, former local woolen mill official, now under a six-year prison sentence for embezzlement, was too ill to answer a court summons here, Judge Philip Williams in corporation court here today said he would "take the matter under advisement" before determining whether Krol's $5,000 cash bail should be declared forfeited.

Krol, reported critically ill in Chicago, was ordered to appear today to show cause why his bond should not be forfeited following his failure to appear several weeks ago, after the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals refused him a writ of error on the judgment of the local court whereby he was given six years in prison for embezzlement of Arthur G. Jones Woolen Co. funds.

Affidavits were introduced today, signed by Krol's Chicago physician, saying that Krol was critically ill. Krol's sister also was present.

Drive Carefully Today

Know Your Traffic Laws

Ignorance is sometimes bliss, but not when it comes to State traffic laws and local ordinances. Ignorance of law excuses no driver, either legally or morally, for a violation which results in an automobile smashup. It is every driver's duty to know and to obey all city and State traffic laws. Moreover, such knowledge is just about as essential to your safety as the actual mechanics of driving.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors.

The Life Everlasting.

Many years ago, in a book written by James Hadley, the father of President Hadley, of Yale, he remarked that, apart from the testimony of religion, the survival of bodily death by the individual seemed to him more probable than extinction, but a belief in it must be accompanied by grave doubts. That is, leaving religion entirely out of one's speculation, the life everlasting seemed slightly more probable than death. This was the view of a greata scholar, one who was familiar with most of the important literature of the subject and who was himself a profound and original thinker (and a believer).

I myself use advisedly the phrase "the testimony of religion," because those who have never had any religious faith or have lost what they once had are often inclined to think that religious faith has no basis except wishfulness; whereas true religious belief, although mingled with emotion like love of family or love of country, is as thoroughly founded on reason as any thought, idea or opinion that can not be mathematically proved, such as the roundness of the earth, which (despite Kipling's story) is an accepted fact.

I believe in the life beyond the grave because man was made for immortality. Every baby has enough potentialities in his mind for which eternity is not too long. Human beings have the marvelous quality of development—one of the most striking differences between man and all other specimens of the animal race. If the cleverest dog lived to be 80 he would be no further advanced than at the age of 5. Whereas even the humblest mind may steadily develop.

It seems to me unlikely in a universe so marvelous as this that man should be the only failure. I don't believe he is. But if there is no future life, he most certainly is. Compare him with a fish. The fish does exactly what he was born and made to do, fulfills all his functions, and dies; he is a complete success. But man has, in the Miltonic phrase, thoughts that wander through eternity. Visions, ideas, imaginations, longings—man can not live by bread alone. Do Beethoven and the bug have precisely the same fate?

If there is no continuance of the individual, then evolution is the worst of all possible worsts. The emergence of man's mind, supposed to be the consummate flower of the whole long process, was the most tragic fact in the universe. And for this reason many who do not believe in the future life are quite naturally pessimists. Thomas Hardy wrote a poem in which he said that men and women would all have been better off if they had never become conscious.

It is quite natural that men should differ on this question of life after death; but it is absurd to say that belief in a future life is unreasonable. There is nothing more reasonable.

U. S. Spurs Liquor Clean-up in Virginia

Richmond, July 16 (Spl.).—Increased activities of agents of the Federal Alcoholic Taxation Unit, Bureau of Internal Revenue, are shown today in reports for last week received by John W. Wickham, in charge of the Virginia unit.

Last week 14 stills were seized in the State, as against 2 the preceding week; 1,073 gallons of spirits was taken, as against 30 gallons the preceding week, and 36,150 gallons of mash destroyed, as compared to 2,050 gallons the week before.

Cumberland Man Victim of Potomac

C. P. Ingram, 35, Believed to Have Hit Rock in Dive.

Cumberland, Md., July 16 (Spl.).—Charles Peter Ingram, 35, employed at the N. & G. Taylor Co. tin mills, was drowned in the Potomac at Sidaways Beach, near here, yesterday.

He was known as an excellent swimming and it is thought he was stunned by striking a rock or log when he dived into shallow water. He had a discolored eye and swelling on the head.

He is survived by two small sons. Ingram, who was better known as Peter Staub, came from Harpers Ferry, W. Va., where his parents reside.

Roanoke Youth Killed, 3 Hurt in Auto Crash

Amelia Courthouse, Va., July 16 (AP).—James Patrick Taylor, 19, of Roanoke, was instantly killed and his three companions injured near here yesterday when their car struck a bridge railing and careened into a tree.

His companions, a Miss Taylor, a Miss Turner, and a Mr. Van Standt, whose first names were not learned here, were carried back to Roanoke. Their injuries were not believed serious. Miss Taylor was not related to the young man killed.

2 Hurt as Car Crashes On Maryland Mountain

Middletown, Md., July 16 (Spl.).—Abraham Cherney, 18, of Baltimore, is at the Frederick City Hospital with a fractured hip and severe lacerations on the head and body. His companion, Abraham Aries, of Chicago, has a fractured shoulder blade and severe lacerations.

They were injured yesterday when Aries' automobile left the State highway at a sharp curve on South Mountain, west of Middletown, went over an embankment and was demolished.

Two Maryland Towns Obtain More PWA Cash

Increases in two PWA loans and grants to Maryland towns were announced yesterday by the Public Works Administration.

An allotment of $125,000 for a sewer system and sewage disposal plant at Bel Air was increased to $143,000 because construction bids exceeded the original allocation. For the same reason, Clear Spring's allotment of $23,000 for a water system was raised to $26,000.

Danville to Free Union Leader; Charge Lacking

Danville, Va., July 16 (Spl.).—Claude Clark, of Concord, N. C., organizer for the National Textile Union, probably will be released from jail tomorrow.

Commonwealth's Attorney George Bendall said he was at loss to find any grounds on which Clark could be prosecuted. The vagrancy charges will not stand, he said, because the man had visible means of subsistence and he added that addressing a group on a street corner was not in itself an offense.

2 Fined in Attack At Tubize Plant; Both Note Appeal

Hopewell, Va., July 16 (AP).—C. C. Burnley and Clyde Crocker were fined $100 each in police court today on charges of assaulting L. P. Bradshaw, emergency employe of the Tubize Chatillon Corporation. Both appealed.

Bradshaw was one of a group of men taken into the plant under guard to clean material from the machinery left idle by the walkout. Plant officials said the half-finished nitro-cotton constituted an explosion risk.

Bradshaw was beaten after leaving the plant and Burnley and Crocker were arrested shortly afterward. The case was transferred from Prince George County, where the assault occurred, to the Hopewell jurisdiction at the request of defense counsel. Four other men, arrested Friday near Petersburg after a truck convoy laden with finished rayon from the tubize plant had been stolen, were given a preliminary hearing at Prince George this afternoon. The defendants are N. J. Burnley, C. A. Hall, T. E. Reed and R. D. Lacks.

Glen Echo Park Proposes to Present Classic Drama in Natural Sylvan Setting

'As You Like It' Chosen for the Initial Vehicle

Local Players to Perform; a Cup Regatta Benefit; Amusement Chat.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

Much interest will be aroused locally by the announcement, made yesterday, that Glen Echo Park, under the managing directorship of Leonard B. Schloss, recognized as a National leader in amusement park conduct, plans to present an open-air performance of Shakespeare's "As You Like It" in the near future.

Surveyors at present are engaged in making a layout of the grounds just north of the Midway Building, where seats will be constructed in a sylvan grove to accommodate several thousand people.

If the surveyors' plats indicate sufficient space for adequate seating and staging, without sacrificing any of the fine old trees in the area, negotiations will at once be entered into with the view to casting the play from among the foremost of Washington's professional and nonprofessional players. The play, if and when presented, will be staged under the direction of Charles Wilson, formerly stage director of the Ben Greet Players.

Miss Starr to Supervise.

Frances Starr, in private life Mrs. R. Golden Donaldson, of Washington, by reason of her long association with the late David Belasco and expert knowledge of lighting and staging, has been invited to supervise these and other aspects of the proposed presentation.

Joe Turner, local sportsman, wrestling and boxing promoter, has agreed to assist in securing the services of some well-known wrestler for the role of Charles, the Wrestler, an important character in the play, and has suggested either Champion Jim Londos or Everett Marshall for the part.

If preliminary surveys prove the project feasible, it is probable that "As You Like It" will be presented twice daily for at least a week. Other classic dramas subsequently will be presented, if public favor warrants.

Popular prices will be charged for the better seats at both matinee and evening performances, but a large section of seats will be available at no cost, in line with Glen Echo's established policy, at all performances.

Fame and fortune, as the saying goes, await Washingtonians possessed of distinctive talents that may be utilized in enhancing the entertainment value of the stage revue form of presentation. Vincent Lopez, one of the foremost of America's exponents of modern music, who is headlining the current stage bill at Loew's Fox, has issued a call for talent that is unique. He is not in the market for singers. Already he has on his roster some of the most accomplished vocalists of stage and radio.

However, anyone who can deliver a novel performance—comedy, dancing, acrobatics, whatnot—will be given a personal audition by Mr. Lopez during his present engagement at the Fox. Those who make the grade, if any, will be taken on tour with the Lopez revue. Mr. Lopez, by the way, has discovered much fine talent by this method.

Those wishing to apply for auditions are requested to present themselves at the stage entrance of the Fox Theater at 9:30 o'clock Wednesday morning.

That Old Human Equation.

We are not alone in the view that the human equation is a vital element in the success of the current campaign for a clean-up of the screen and that much that appears on the silver sheet is there in response to a definite public demand.

Mr. Richard Watts, jr., one of the more erudite of the commentators on the cinema, had this to say in yesterday's issue of the New York Herald Tribune:

> I do not think that I am attempting to evade the issue when I fall back on the old defense that the screen must, in its very nature, reflect the manners and morals of its time and place. Being strictly a topical medium, it must inevitably rely chiefly on the life of the present for its plot material, its ideas and its speech. Being planned for a society based on the need for financial profit, it must be pretty careful to reflect the taste and the caliber of its paying guests. It is, therefore, reasonably safe to say that if the films deal somewhat frequently with divorce, promiscuity, gangsters and easy-going homicide, this is because such subjects bulk pretty large in the National existence. Blaming the films for degrading modern life, rather than modern life for debasing the cinema, is one of the greatest recent examples of the good old custom of putting the cart before the horse.

Back to Penny Arcade.

A bulletin which comes to hand from Mr. Howard Swain, 30 Rockefeller plaza, New York, has this to say:

> The public and only the public is to blame for the type of motion picture entertainment it gets, according to Arthur L. Mayer, director of the Rialto Theater, in New York, and former advertising manager for Paramount, who writes his views in Liberty Magazine.
>
> It has always been a matter of public taste even since the opening da of the peep-show arcade in Fourteenth street, New York, when the following receipts were scored:
>
> U. S. Battleships..... $0.25
> Joseph Jefferson ..... .43
> Ballet Dancer 1.05
> Girl Climbing Tree.... 3.65
>
> "In Springfield, Ill.," writes Mr. Mayer, "only 20 people came to see 'Abraham Lincoln' . . . Play dates were given immediately on 'Scarface' and repeat bookings are continuing to date . . . In the Salt Lake City territory, the only way exhibitors can be compelled to play 'Alice in Wonderland' is by refusing to give them Mae West pictures until they do . . . In the Minneapolis territory 50 per cent of the exhibitors asked for cancellations on George Arliss in 'Voltaire.' One did ten times as much business on 'I'm No Angel' . . . Boston's taste was exemplified by the fact that there were no cancellations on 'Little Caesar,' but 40 cancellations on 'Abraham Lincoln.'

An Indifferent Public.

"I believe that there is no exhibitor who does not greatly desire to be numbered among the socially useful members of his community . . . Indeed I think that most exhibitors would make heavy personal sacrifices to forego showing shabby, meretricious, or salacious pictures. The reason they do not do so is unrelated to any trade practices; it is because the public has thus far been completely indifferent to pictures which failed to conform to the accepted canons of public entertainment."

These citations are made in no spirit of controversy, nor as conclusive proof of an insuperable deterioration of public taste. They are offered merely as evidence of the existence of a condition that may not logically be ignored in the concerted drive for the elimination of indecency from mass entertainment.

Washington and Prince Georges County fight fans who were unable to attend the Baer-Carnera championship bout in the Madison Square Garden Bowl on Long Island recently, or have been unable to catch the pictures in nearby showings, still will have a chance today, tomorrow and Wednesday at the Arcade Theater, in Hyattsville, Md.

The films will be shown beginning at 6 p. m., every hour on the hour, with the last projection at 10 p. m. The pictures record the entire fight, blow by blow, with the knockdowns repeated in slow motion.

Regatta Benefit.

"The Queen's Gambit," Mrs. Leslie Frank's prize-winning play in this year's Art Club workshop contest, recently presented with great success by the Arts Club dramatic group and the Playbox Theater, will be repeated Wednesday evening, August 1, at 8:30 o'clock, in the garden of the National Women's Party Clubhouse, the old Belmont home, at 144 B street northeast, for the benefit of this year's President's Cup Regatta.

Harold A. Long, chairman of the drama committee of the Arts Club, and William I. Deming, vice president of the Arts Club, have been appointed to membership in the President's Cup Regatta Association, and are in full charge of the entertainment.

"The Queen's Gambit" enlists the services of a cast of 19 players, foremost among whom will be Maurice Jarvis, Virginia True, Caroline McKinley, Richard Kreuzberg, Forney Reese and Miner Ellis.

Presentation of "The Queens Gambit" is one of the civic promotions which have been scheduled here to assure the success of the President's Cup Regatta. This annual aquatic event is scheduled to take place on the Potomac off Hains Point, September 20, 21, 22 and 23.

When the "Elks' Showboat" shoves off from the Seventh Street wharf tonight for one of the Wilson Line's delightful "Moonlight Trips" down the Potomac, it will carry a heavy cargo of artists who will enliven the cruise no end. Prominent among them will be that robust tenor, Bert Granoff, whose voice has been heard these many weeks past in vocal interludes interspersed among the overtures played at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater under the veteran baton of Maestro C. Frederick Clark. You know those Elks!

Hollywood "Big Shots" Seek Mental Relaxation

And it seems to be the lady's move. The lady, of course, is little Miss Shirley Temple, whose triumph in "Little Miss Marker" has been extraordinary and complete. Her slightly perturbed young opponent at the simple game of chess is that precocious youngster, Baby Le Roy, the lad who smacks W. C. Fields on the head with a hammer in "The Old-Fashioned Way." We understand that the simpler pleasures of these two prodigious kids consist of the solution of abstruse problems in solid geometry, trigonometry, and calculus!

Liquor Witness Held for Court

Cumberland, Md., July 16 (Spl.). When Elmer Lightner, defense witness in the case of Charles Ralston, charged with violating the liquor laws, testified that he bought a half-pint of liquor at the Ralston place, but not from Ralston, contradicting testimony of a Government witness, United States Commissioner Taylor Morrison ordered Lightner held in $500 for the action of the Federal court for buying untaxed liquor in violation of the law.

This arrest, the first of the kind here, is under the liquor-taxing act passed January 11, 1934. Commissioner Morrison said it was evident Lightner was attempting to help Ralston and interfere with the case.

Ralston was held under additional bond.

Straight From the Studios

By Edwin Schallert.

Hollywood, July 15.—Cecil B. DeMille is meeting the censorship demands with a flourish. His next picture will be "The Crusades." It will be a mammoth feature, comparable in all respects with his biggest undertakings like "The Ten Commandments" and "The King of Kings," and the so-far-unseen "Cleopatra." Indeed, it may outdo all of them.

MAE WEST.

DeMille declares that it will be a production portraying the greatest and most inspiring struggle of the nations of the world, and such characters will be seen in the film as Richard, the Lionhearted, the Sultan Saladin and all the kings of Europe who engaged in the Crusades. The leading figure will be Richard. Four royal princesses will be the feminine leads.

"The unselfish nature of the conflict of the Crusades, in which the great and low, the young and old gladly gave their lives for an ideal, brought chivalry to its height and shaped by supreme effort and sacrifice, the beginnings of the modern world"—thus DeMille about the era depicted.

The quest for a David Copperfield goes on, with Frank Lawton, as well as Peter Trent, mentioned for the role, but nothing definite about their assignment, and M.-G.-M. is still carrying on their search, with the intent of starting the film in the next two or three weeks. Meanwhile, the name of Edna Mae Oliver has been added to those already assigned. She will appear as Aunt Betsy Trotwood in the production. Other permanents in this film include Lionel Barrymore, as Dan Peggotty; Elizabeth Allen, as David's mother, and Jane Cadell as Mrs. Micawber, and still much heard of Charles Laughton appearing as Micawber.

At Last!
Or Maybe Not.

Mae West has some defenders among cities of the country. Even if St. Louis and New Orleans don't like the idea of having their names associated with her films, at least Oklahoma City and Fort Worth are amenable to the idea. From an Oklahoma City editor came this wire yesterday: "In view of the fast that St. Louis and New Orleans refuse to accept Mae West, socially or cinematically, we believe that Oklahoma City will be glad to claim her as their very own, and we humbly submit the suggestion for a new title 'The Oklahoma Girl.'"

Fort Worth has made it a somewhat civic matter, on the other hand. A motion was made in their city council proposing that word should be sent that her picture be called "The Fort Worth Woman."

Meanwhile, the Gordian knot has apparently been sliced, because the title of the picture is "The Belle of the Gay Nineties." Objectors are to be heard from!

Mary Lou Treen, the red-haired actress signed for "Gentlemen Are Born," has impressed so favorably at Warner Brothers that she has been given a long-term contract. She is of the Charlotte Greenwood type, about 6 feet tall, and has a gift for comedy. She was born and reared in Hollywood, adding to the procession that is gradually being drawn from the "home town" to the movies. She played in vaudeville in her own act for a time.

• • • •

David O. Selznick, of M-G-M, has signed Hugh Walpole, noted English writer, to a term contract which will run until November.

Edward Brophy will play a hard-boiled district manager in "Have a Heart," with Jean Parker and James Dunn. This will be Brophy's third picture in the last four weeks. Upon completion of the current assignment he will go into "Death on the Diamond."

"Beauty and Truth," a Technicolor musical two-reeler, written and directed by John Farrow, is to start immediately. Christian Rub, Cora Sue Collins and Ralph Bushman are in the cast.

Billy Bevan, comic, has come out of retirement for a role in "The Painted Veil," Greta Garbo's new production.

The Potomac Lures Many On Hot Days

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The season for boating on the Potomac River and Chesapeake Bay, now at its height, finds many Washingtonians enjoying daily excursions on the water, grateful for the respite from city heat.

The owners of small boats stock them with ice and picnic luncheons, load their friends aboard and cruise down the river. The stream below Mount Vernon, where the water is deep and cool, is a favorite destination. After a refreshing swim, the groups frequently sup aboard in the late evening and remain down the river until the cooler hours of the night.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward K. Morris have one of the most attractive of the small cruisers on the river, and besides frequent afternoon and evening trips, often spend several days aboard. A little later in the season the Morrises, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. John E. Parker, will set sail on a week's cruise in the bay.

Panjax Serves Well.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald McKnew also own a smart cruiser, but this season will not use it as the family is established at Cape May, N. J., for the remainder of the summer.

Mr. William Keane Ryan, of Philadelphia, who has been making his home in Washington for several years, spends much time aboard his cruiser, the Panjax, named for a beautiful tropical fish. Mr. Ryan is more than generous with his boat, and frequently, when he is out of town, turns it over to a group of friends for their pleasure.

Mr. Chester A. Snow, jr., derives great pleasure from his boat, the Madelon. He recently returned from a 10-day cruise on the bay, accompanied by a group of friends.

The Bidou Bows.

Sunday afternoon, those aboard the numerous small craft on the Potomac turned to admire the handsome yacht, Bidou, belonging to Mr. James Moffett, of New York, the Federal housing administrator, who cruised on Chesapeake Bay Sunday with a party of friends from Washington. Mr. Moffett brought the Bidou to Washington this season.

The craft, gleaming in white and mahogany with brass trim, made a regal appearance among many fine boats on the course.

Mrs. Joseph Moran, of New York, who has been in Washington for some time, was hostess to friends aboard her yacht on a week-end cruise to the bay.

Roberts Arrive Here to Reside

Son Occupies Apartment of Treasury Official.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert 3d, of Atlanta, are occupying the Mayflower Hotel apartment of Mr. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, during his absence from the city. Mr. Robert 3d has accepted a position in Washington, and with his wife, the former Miss Georgia Mary Mion, of Atlanta, will reside in the Capital.

Following their marriage about a year ago, Mr. Robert returned to Georgia Tech and completed his senior year. His sister, Miss Louis Ayres Robert, is now with her mother at Sea Island Beach, Ga. She will spend a few days here the latter part of July en route to New York to enter the Metropolitan swimming meet.

Envoy to Chile Plans Departure

Will Leave for Dominican Republic and Haiti.

The Charge d'Affaires of Chile, Senor Don Emilio Edwards Bello, is planning to leave Washington next week for Haiti and the Dominican Republic to present his credentials to those countries.

Senor Edwards Bello is Chilean Minister to Havana and has been Charge d'Affaires ad interim in Washington for the several months while the Ambassador, Senor Don Manuel Trucco, is in Santiago.

Senor de Edwards Bello and their children will join the Minister in Miami in several weeks and will go with him to Havana. Their elder son, Emilio Edwards Bello, jr., will return to Washington in the fall to attend school.

Civic Symphony to Play Tomorrow at Sylvan Theater Festival.

Lovers of the art of the dance will attend the annual festival concert of the Lisa Gardiner Dance Group at the Sylvan Theater tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock, when for the first time the Civic Symphony Orchestra will be heard at the Monument.

The orchestra will offer three instrumental festival numbers. Mr. Bailey F. Alart, who organized this new musical organization six months ago and has built it up to 70 members, including many well-known musicians of the Capital, will conduct the orchestra.

Invited guests of the Summer Festival committee, tomorrow will be officials of the Government, including members of the Interior Department staff and the Office of National Capital Parks. Dr. William Manger, counselor of the Pan-American Union, and Miss Julia McLean, of the Pan-American Union, are expected to attend as guests of Miss Lisa Gardiner and the Summer Festival committee.

Miss Emma Ody Pohl, and a party of guests from the University of Virginia, will attend.

The ushers for the festival concert will be headed by Mrs. Charles M. Hunter 3d, and Mrs. William P. Kilgore, and will include members of the Players Club of Washington, who assist each week at the festival programs.

Cabin Party Adds Pavilion For Dancing

The starlight ball, which will take place Saturday evening in the old log cabin belonging to Mrs. William Laird Dunlop, jr., on Lake Jackson, just 30 miles from the Capital, has aroused so much interest among the young people who are remaining in and about Washington that it has been determined to build a large dance platform in a clearing by the lake so that there will be plenty of room to dance.

Old Southern melodies, dating back to old plantation days, will be sung, and there also will be popular dance music.

Guests who so elect may swim in Lake Jackson or in the swimming pool, which will be illuminated for the occasion.

At midnight an old-fashioned Southern supper will be served by costumed waitresses wearing red handkerchiefs on their heads in the fasion of Aunt Jemima.

Miss Mary Senate Howes, chairman of the debutante committee, will have assisting her Miss Margaret McMullen, Miss Helen Defrees, Miss Betsy Hartz, Miss Katharine Pearson, Miss Frances Simpson, Miss Betsy Simpson, Miss Julia Koester, Miss Margaret Spear, Miss Katherine Bentley, Miss Helen McKenna, Miss Anne Potts and Miss Helen Potts.

Lieut. Crommelin Marries Mrs. Clendening at Academy Chapel.

A wedding of interest to Washington which took place last Saturday in Annapolis, Md., was that of Mrs. Sally Huntress Clendening to Lieut. Henry Crommelin, U. S. N. The ceremony was performed in the Naval Academy Chapel with Chaplain William Thomas officiating in the prescence of only the two immediate families.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. George Warren Miller, of East Orange, N. J., and Mr. George Huntress, of Boston. She is a sister of Mrs. Birbeck C. Crabbe, of Toms River, N. N., who lost his life in the Akron disaster.

Members of the family present at the wedding were the bride's mother Mrs. Miller, and Mr. George Warren Miller; Miss Gertrude Huntress, sister of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Birbeck C. Lieut. Crommelin is the son of Mr. John G. Crommelin, of Montgomery, Ala., and the late Mrs. Crommelin.

Sunday School Fete Arranged For Teachers

Nation-Wide Appreciation Program Set for October 6.

Philadelphia (U.P.).—What is termed "the most spectacular demonstration in the religious and civic life of America" is under way in this city—a project to hold, on October 6, in every community a civic celebration in appreciation of the work of the more than 2,000,000 Sunday school teachers, Protestant, Catholic and Jewish.

Denominational and Sunday school leaders, as well as civic organizations, are promoting the movement, which was originated by a newspaper man, Dr. William T. Ellis, of Swarthmore, Pa., chairman of the National executive committee.

"This National recognition day for Sunday school teachers sounds a sweet note in a sour time. We are used to mass meetings for protest, for reform, for 'causes.' This is simply and only a public 'Thank you' to the vast host of men and women, who, Sunday after Sunday, rain or shine, without remuneration or recognition, have been teaching the more than 20,000,000 members of the Sunday school.

"They have been one of the major educational agencies of our time, instilling the cardinal virtues into each generation of children and youth," Dr. Ellis said.

An afternoon Sunday school parade on October 6, an evening mass meeting in each community's largest auditorium, and special services in every church on the following morning are features of the program.

Culbertson on Bridge

Justifying a Response.

Rules of Bridge are made to be observed, and following them will usually bring the best results in actual play. However, there are many occasions when a player is justified in departing from rules and depending somewhat on imagination. This is particularly true in a hard-fought Rubber game where the opposing players have a part-score and have undertaken a contract which, if fulfilled, will give them game. In such a situation as this the house is on fire and it is a question only of saving what may be saved of the furniture. When both sides have a game and one side has a part-score of 70, obviously it requires only the slightest touch to chalk up another lost Rubber. While tremendous penalties should not be taken in such a situation, still a slight daring in the bidding may perhaps be pardoned and this was South's justification on the hand below.

East, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.
East-West part-score 70.

	♠ Q 2 5 ♡ Q 10 8 7 ◇ A Q 4 ♣ A K 10
♠ 6 3 ♡ 9 5 ◇ 6 5 3 2 ♣ 6 5 4 3 2		♠ K J 10 9 7 ♡ A K 6 2 ◇ K J 10 9 ♣ —
	♠ A 4 2 ♡ J 4 3 ◇ 8 7 ♣ Q J 9 8 7

East	South	West	North
1♠	Pass	Pass	Dbl. (1)
2♣ (2)	2NT (3)	Pass	3NT (4)
Dbl.	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—North could reopen the bidding in this position with as little as 2 honor-tricks; holding 4 honor-tricks, he has far more than the required strength to double.

2—East decides to make it difficult for South to respond.

3—South's hand, of course, is strong enough to justify some response. He decides, however, that a bid of three clubs will get nowhere except to a possible part score, and so boldly takes command of the situation with a bid of two notrump.

4—An obvious raise to game.

In view of East's bid and rebid, West had no option but to open the spade suit. A small spade was played from Dummy and East's Nine forced South's Ace. South could count one and possibly two spade tricks, and five clubs, the fulfillment of the contract seemingly resting upon a successful finesse in diamonds. It was true that there were two heart tricks available if they could be established before East had established his spade suit, but time was lacking for this line of play. South led a club to the Ace in Dummy and when East discarded a heart the prospect of fulfilling the contract appeared brighter. East would be forced to find many discards. However, if East held all the high cards there was no occasion to hurry, so a small heart was led from Dummy. East won with the King, returned the King of spades and followed with another spade, which was won in the Dummy with the Queen. Now four more rounds of clubs were taken and East was forced to find four discards. He parted first with his remaining small hearts and then two diamonds, but on the last club was reluctantly compelled to give up one of his established spades, as South at this time had an absolute count on his hand. Had he dared to discard another diamond, leaving the King blank, the diamond suit would have been led and the finesse refused. After running the clubs, South then led a heart. East won and cashed his remaining spade, but was then compelled to lead a diamond to Dummy's A-Q, conceding the remaining tricks to the Declarer. Ability to visualize the opponents' hands was one of the principal ingredients in the fulfillment of the contract.

Tomorrow's Hand.

North, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.

	♠ A Q 10 9 4 ♡ J 9 ◇ J 5 4 ♣ A 10 5
♠ J 6 5 3 ♡ 8 6 5 3 2 ◇ 8 7 ♣ 3 2		♠ K 2 ♡ A K 4 ◇ K Q 10 9 3 ♣ Q J 6 4
	♠ 8 7 ♡ Q 10 7 ◇ A 9 6 2 ♣ K 9 8 7

The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Chaise Lounge Goes Outdoors In the Garden

By Ruth Anne Davis.

EVEN the chaise longue is going in for garden life. Shedding its frills and furbelows, it has donned a serviceable duck cloth over a flexible frame that suits it to life in the open.

There's one in the garden department of a local store. With little maneuvering it can be twisted into a variety of shapes. Up goes the back, down go the feet—and there is a luxuriously comfortable garden chair. Down goes the back, up come the feet, and what have you? A regular couch! With back and feet up, it's a comfortable chaise longue.

What a boon to convalescents! They can keep the chaisette (as it's called in this new guise) on the terrace or the lawn and rest their weary bones from morning until night without fear the place will look like an open-air sanitarium.

Traveling Companion.

A Connecticut avenue shop is catering to summer travelers with a new piece of luggage known as the "companion" dress bag. It carries from three to five dresses, and may be depended on to keep them free from wrinkles; and as fresh looking as the day they were packed.

For week-end jaunts it's a nusiance to load the car with a lot of luggage. That's why these bags are unusually popular now. Carry along kit for creams, toothbrush, &c., and the dress bag for the clothes—and that's all you need. They are available in durable "sport cloth" or duckoid materials, or fine domestic and imported leathers.

For auto travel they may be placed flat against the back of the seat or against the side of the car. Airplane travelers find they occupy no more space than a large brief case.

• • • •

Trays for Everything.

Now, during a sale in a local shop, there are some trays 22 inches by 17, that are breakfast trays, sandwich trays, cocktail trays—or any kind of refreshment tray.

They come in walnut, maple, mahogany—or in plain wood lacquered—black, green, blue, pink, and ivory.

• • • •

Cool Dogs.

It isn't half as hard as it looks to give a small dog a thorough clipping. And most dogs consider it quite a treat in scorching weather to be treated in such barber fashion.

All amateurs who would begin clipping should take advantage of a certain sale and buy some $2.50 dog clippers for $1.

Refreshment Sets.

An F street store has some refreshment sets that are popular for midsummer wedding gifts. They consist of six porcelain glasses and a porcelain pitcher with a lemon and orange squeezer top.

• • • •

Scottie Banks.

It's possible to hoard no end of nickels, pennies and dimes in one of the Scottie banks featured in an F street shop. And according to the manager, that's what many people are doing now. Several weeks ago the first Scottie banks were put out on the counter; within a few days they had all been sold. Immediately he reordered, and soon there were more. But these too are selling rapidly.

Once the money is dropped through the slot in Scottie's head, there's no getting it back without unlocking the trapdoor in the bottom. The slot is arranged so there's no trouble putting the money in, but it simply won't shake out. There are red, black and white banks to choose from.

• • • •

Indoor Sand Box.

A local store suggests a new way of pleasing Junior. "If he likes to play in sand—and what child doesn't?—he's an unfortunate kid if he lives in an apartment house where there's no yard for his sand box. At least one would think so right off. But wait a minute. Come up and see what we have. Junior can have a sand box right inside the house, and it won't be the kind that gets things mussed up!"

An invitation like that can scarcely be ignored. For here's a shop that lives up to its word, this time with little sand troughs. Each trough is filled with sand and comes complete with a wooden stool for Junior to sit on while he makes mud pies or frog houses. The set is only $1.

• • • •

Novelty Glassware.

Now is a grand time to invest in novelty glassware. Ordinarily one doesn't care to pay as much for it as for the more conservative kind. So while a local shop is selling some for half price it is an ideal time for such shopping.

Highball glasses colored with humorous sketches, cocktail glasses a mass of varicolored spiral lines, and beer glasses in a variety of styles—these are half price for the time being.

• • • •

Wooden Paper Dolls.

When rainy days come along it's a good idea to have something in the house to keep the "young misses" amused. She'd be likely to get a kick out of some flat dolls, resembling paper dolls, only made of wood. They're known in the store as wooden paper dolls. Ten of them come in a large box with several styles of dresses. You can get them in a downtown store.

Berries Brighten Dessert Side of Menu

Old-Fashioned Blackberry Pie Will Delight Most Particular Family.

By Ann Barrett.

MAYBE you won't agree with explorer Carveth Wells that a good blackberry pit is about the eating-est dessert going. But somewhere in the dessert list berries will bringhten things up for you likely—as they do for millions of other folks.

Maybe it'll be a blackberry cobbler (with hard sauce) that'll make your mouth water. Or a grand blueberry kuchen. Or a tart and colorful raspberry-currant ice.

You feel yourself slipping? Well, here are the recipes, so you can get going on your eating pleasure. First for the blackberry pie. For a good, family-size pie, you'll need 1 quart of berries. Mix them with sugar (¾ to 1 cup, depending on sourness of berries) and 2 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca.

Let this mixture stand while you make the pie crust, and line a 9-inch pie plate with it. Brush this crust with unbeaten white of egg, turn in the berry mixture, dot with 1 tablespoon butter, wet edge of crust with cold water, and put on top crust. Press edges of crust together firmly, brush crust with unbeaten egg (white or yolk) and cut a slit or two in center to let steam escape. Bake 10 minutes in hot oven (about 425 F.) then reduce heat to 350 F and bake about 30 minutes more.

Blackberry Cobbler.

Another dessert that has proved to be the berries for years and years is blackberry cobbler, made like this. First mix 1½ quarts blackberries with 1 cup sugar, 1 tablespoon lemon juice and 2 tablespoons melted butter, in a shallow baking pan or dish. Then cover this with a biscuit dough made from the following ingredients and rolled about ¼ inch thick: 2 cups sifted general-use flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon sugar, ½ cup shortening and milk enough to make soft dough, probably 2-3 cup. Make a slit or two in this biscuit-cover, so as to let steam escape, and bake it in a hot over (about 425 F.) about 20 minutes. Serve hot, with hard sauce.

Blueberry Kuchen.

For a kuchen of the quick (baking powder) variety, there's no better topping known than blueberries cooked lusciously in sugar. This is how the story goes: First sift together 1½ cups sifted general-use flour, 2½ teaspoons baking powder, ½-cup granulated sugar, ½ teaspoon salt.

Then lightly mix in ¼ cup milk (first mixed with 1 well-beaten egg) and ¼ cup melted butter. Pour this batter into a well-greased shallow pan (about 8 by 8 by 2 inches). Cover with 3 cups blueberries or huckleberries. Then sprinkle with ½ cup powdered sugar (first mixed with ¼ teaspoon cinnamon). Bake in moderate oven (about 350 F.) 30 to 40 minutes. Serve warm, with whipped cream.

Raspberry-Currant Ice.

To change the subject to a frozen dessent, here's raspberry-current ice—one of the most refreshing and colorful desserts imaginable. For this, first crush about 1 quart each raspberries and currants, sprinkle them with ½ cup powdered sugar, and let them stand till juice gets nicely started. Then press them through a fine sieve to get about 1¾ cups juice. Meanwhile, put 3 cups water and 1 cup sugar in saucepan and boil about 5 minutes. Cool this syrup and add it to juice. Then turn the mixture into freezing tray of mechanical refrigerator (or into crank freezer) and freeze.

Blueberry Kuchen Is Also Something Pretty Fine and Luscious.

Sun-Tan and Evening White Nice Contrast

Cottons and Laces, Fluffy or Tailored, Best for the Purpose.

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, July 16.—It's a season of contrasts. Dark accessories with light costumes. Light or bright accessories with dark costumes. And no contrast is more effective than that of a white evening dress cut to show sun-tanned arms and back.

Of course brown-and-white is one of the most fashionable contrasts there is, anyway. Which makes sun-tan and white smart as well as attractive.

Often the dress is all-white and is often worn without any contrasting accents, giving your suntan the center of the stage.

When color is used there's not much of it. A contrasting sash, maybe . . . one that matches the slippers. Or contrasting flower or jewelry. And sometimes it is actually worked into the material itself.

Embroidered Motifs.

That's what's been done in the dress illustrated. Little embroidered motifs make tiny bright splotches on the white material. You'll find this sort of thing quite often in organdies, and the favorite colors for such embroidery are red, green, yellow and blue.

Then of course there's dotted Swiss . . . white ground with colored dots. Generally these dots are red or blue.

Besides these two cottons, other fashionable evening materials in white are cotton lace, eyelet batiste, seersucker, net, pique, dimity, voile, linen, chiffon, taffeta, sheer crepes, flat crepes, mousseline de soie.

Tailored or Fluffy.

Some of these dresses are of the fluffy type, and some are tailored. It depends on the material chosen, of course, since obviously pique and linen don't lend themselves to fluffiness.

The little detachable cape or jacket which so many of them have is practical . . . makes them a complete costume without an extra evening wrap.

Of course you don't have to be sun-tanned to wear white in the evening. It's smart anyway—even if you've remained the palest of pale-skins.

What Today Means

"Cancer."

If July 17 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:15 to 11:15 a. m., from 2:15 to 4:15 p. m. and from 7:15 to 9:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 6:15 to 8:15 a. m., from 12:15 to 2:15 p. m. and from 10:15 p. m. until midnight.

On this July 17 you may have one or more visitors who might, in discussing business, consume a good deal of your time, but ultimate results should fully justify the time given them. A decided improvement in business should be experienced on this date and a more optimistic outlook evinced. There is a possibility of your receiving some very pleasing news. An unexpected call may also result in your ultimately receiving a substantial amount of money from the party making it. Great care must be exercised should you have contact with legal documents of any sort, or the drawing up of any form of business agreement.

If a woman and July 17 is your natal day, this should prove a "red letter" one in your life's calendar. Do not let a gloomy thought have any room in your mind but reflect on the many blessings you have had, for which you should be grateful. There are many pleasant surprises coming to you, if not on this date, in the near future. Your financial conditions may soon be gratifyingly strengthened. A manifestation of love should very shortly be experienced by you, which will make your life seem much brighter.

Children born on July 17 generally are inclined to be of the studious type when they arrive at school age. They should be encouraged to play with other children, and have an active interest in outdoor sports. They should be required to take an interest in some form of athletics, so their physical development will keep pace with their mental.

If a man and July 17 is your birth anniversary, your versatility is such that you should prosper in any line of commercial work undertaken. The ministry, engineering, the army and legal professions offer men born on this date fame and financial reward.

Contrast in Dark and Light

Either the sun-tanned girl or the one who has carefully preserved her complexion looks well in white these summer evenings. But every white dress should have some dark contrast.

ESCAPE from the SOVIETS

By TATIANA TCHERNAVIN

Tatiana Tchernavin's husband was taken to prison and her own arrest followed, leaving their small son alone in the world. Interviewed by Soviet officials, the author found she was confronted by trumped-up charges at every hand. Prison conditions, too, were terrible. You can pick up her story of privation and misery with today's installment.

I REMEMBER thinking what a bitter mockery it was for the Soviet newspapers to attack Polish prisons where, they said, political prisoners were treated like common criminals. The OGPU's method was much simpler: They regarded us all as common criminals and therefore did not bother to give us any advantages over thieves. Indeed, those who were guilty of some real offense received the lightest punishments, three or five years of concentration camps, where their sentence was speedily reduced.

Many of them ran away, certain that they would find refuge in the big towns until they were caught at some fresh theft. Used to defying social order they felt thoroughly at home in prison; they laughed at the OGPU and were so enterprising that once they managed to steal a suitcase from the prison office. The man in charge of the office had to spend a month in his own prison as a punishment for his negligence.

The only political prisoners who had individual charges brought against them were Mensheviks, Trotskyists and former social-revolutionaries, sometimes respectable party workers of the period of 1905, whose names were entered in the "History of the Party."

Ridiculous Charges.

Those of them who had been in the Tsarist prisons amused us very much by their indignation at the present penal system. They occasionally indulged in fine speeches about "freedom," "rights of the individual," "humaneness" and other things which sounded more naive than any fairy tale. The OGPU regarded them as "politicals," i. e., gave them a piece of meat in their soup, but treated them sternly; for the most part they were sent to Moscow, where some of them had already been in the "Polit-Isolator," a special prison in the hubianka for erring Communists, social revolutionaries and anarchists. From there they were transferred to a special concentration camp in the northern Urals.

The charges against the first three categories of women prisoners—the "wives," those who had been abroad and religious women—were absurdly out of keeping with the actual reason for their arrest. Thus, purchasing silk stockings was described as "espionage on behalf of foreign capitalists;" belonging to an aristocratic family figured as "monarchist propanganda;" being related to an engineer meant "helping and abetting the wreckers' activities;" receiving letters from relatives abroad or writing to them was classed as "furthering foreign intervention" and so on.

Free Exile Horrible.

The sentences were almost invariably five or ten—seldom three—years of penal servitude in the concentration camps. "Free exile" to East Siberia, Northen or Southern Urals and Viatka often proved to be even worse than the camps, because it was impossible to find work in out-of-the-way villages, and the exiles were given neither money nor rations. Solitude in those wilds was to some people more terrible than the crowded camps.

Apparently, the same fate awaited me, and it was only a question of the number of years. Five or ten years was no joke, especially when they might be my last years. But other women were worse off than I, for they went into exile leaving several children behind. My fellow prisoners kept telling me that there was still hope, for I had not yet received my "accusation." It was supposed to be handed to the prisoners not later than a fortnight after the arrest, but was always delayed, generally for two or three months, or more.

Signature Demanded.

I received mine very soon. Three weeks after my arrest I was taken again to the examining officer who interviewed me in the first instance. He had just come into the room and was unlocking his case, pulling out of it bundles of pinkish papers. These were the "accusations" which, to save time, were prepared wholesale. He silently handed me one of them. It was marked by a number exceeding a thousand, though we were still in the third month of the year; it had written on it that I was accused of "furthering economic counter-revolution."

"What is required of me?" I asked, understanding that there was no point in speaking about the accusation, which I simply did not understand; neither of the OGPU officers who examined me ever asked me a single question relating to it.

"Sign that you have been informed of the charge against you."

I signed as firmly and clearly as I could.

"Go back to your cell."

I did as I was told.

No More Interviews.

I was not called up for any more interviews. Everything seemed to have been settled. No explanations were required; no defense was possible. I had now to wait for the verdict, which would no doubt be as absurd as the charge.

I could not have explained what "economic counter-revolution" meant, to say nothing of my "furthering" it; history, literature and art were the subjects at which I had worked all my life. But charges against other prisoners were just as senseless, so that I was no exception.

After presenting me with the accasation the OGPU forgot my existence for four and a half months. In Tsarist prisons preliminary inquiry did not take long and, once the sentence was passed, the prisoner knew that every day brought him nearer freedom. In U. S. S. R. preliminary "inquiry" last five or six months and sometimes more than a year. During the most reactionary periods of Tsardom political prisoners were never to be reckoned by hundreds; they all belonged either to revolutionary parties or to more or less active political groups. In U. S. S. R. the total number of prisoners and convicts in penal camps exceeds a million, and with the rarest exceptions, none of them belong to any political organization.

Ruthless Imprisonment.

Thousands of peasants are exiled without any trial or inquiry; educated men—experts and their families—are imprisoned for months and months during the fictitious "inquiry" into their case. Of late years, when the Bolsheviks have attacked the intellectuals with special ferocity, such numbers of them were imprisoned that there was not a family left some member of which was not in prison or exile.

When the charge had been presented to me and I had lost all hope of release, prison life began to get hold of me more and more. It was not life but a special regime aimed at destroying one's will, capacity for work, feeling of personal dignity and sense of duty. One's existence was confined to a cell with stone walls and a low vaulted ceiling; it was 6 feet long and there was a distance of two feet between the iron bedsteads with hard and dirty straw mattresses. An iron stool and a small table, the heating pipe, a wash basin and an open lavatory seat completed the furnishing.

The window—our only joy—was placed near the ceiling and covered with a close iron grating. In winter the glass was covered with a thick layer of ice. The pane that opened had a sheet of iron over it, with small holes cut in the iron. What came through it was not fresh air, but heavy steam from the kitchen and a smell of stale cabbage soup.

Menacing Footsteps.

The iron door was awe inspiring: it seemed unthinkable that it would ever open to let us out, but at night we were led through it to be cross-examined, or might be led to be shot. When at nine in the evening the night wardress locked all doors turning the key three times, saying 'Sleep! Sleep! Sleep!' and turned out the lights we heard heavy, menacing footsteps coming from the depths of the prison—the soldier on duty was coming for a victim. Everyone sat up and listened breathless with agitation.

He was on the stairs . . . turning the corner . . . his foot caught at the step and he stumbled . . . he was just coming . . . no—he went past! And sometimes he did not go past but standing at the door spelt out to himself the name written on his list.

There was a click of the switch, a naked light right in one's eyes, the shutter in the door rattled, and a coarse face with a blank expression appeared in it.

"What's your name? You are wanted!"

Interviews with the examining officer might mean life or death to the prisoners, and to the officers they often were a means of relaxation. Cultured, honorable women who had not done any wrong, were questioned for hours by the shameless, demoralized agents of the OGPU, who practiced on us every kind of insult and mockery. They felt more free at night, and the doors of our cells opened for us to be led to this moral torture.

Movie Discussions Held in Classroom

Will Improve Taste in Films, It Is Hoped.

New York, July 16 (Spl.).—Classroom work in English from now on will include discussions of suitable motion pictures, according to a recent announcement of the national council of teachers of English.

As a part of the nation-wide program to develop an improved taste for motion pictures, a preview committee of English teachers will select films to be used as a basis of critical discussion in English classes. Such discussions, it is hoped, will arouse student interest in worthwhile films.

While formulating plans, the committee called attention to the success which already has attended their efforts in this direction in a letter sent Friday to John S. Roberts, associate superintendent of schools here.

"Pupils in the experimental group," it was said, "soon formed the habit of seeking the teacher's advice before seeing a picture, a practice unheard of before."

Henry Eighth Gets Praise As Monarch

HENRY VIII may have been a little ruthless in extricating himself from matrimonial entanglements, but he was an admirable person in every other respect. This decision was recently reached—and printed by a London newspaper columnist—on the 443d anniversary of the English monarch's birth.

Henry was not only a dignified scholar, musician, linguist and poet, but also a profound theologian, according to the columnist. And his affairs of the heart never took his mind off the business of bossing a kingsdom. It was he who built up the navy that was to crush the Spanish Armada.

"He was a great patriot and England owes to him her rise as world power," wrote the columnist.

In addition to his patriotic fervor the Tudor king had a delicate fancy. The latter was revealed to the columnist when poems by Henry VIII to Anne Boleyn were published recently.

The ruler who married eight times also wrote an anthem, "O Lord, the Maker of All Things," that is still sung in English cathedrals.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Eczema—A Misnomer.

The term eczema has been used as a diagnostic catchall for many skin eruptions which are characterized by oozing or peeling and accompanied by severe itching. These eruptions vary in intensity, sometimes disappearing and later reappearing. New attacks cause serum to ooze from the affected areas of the skin; thus the term wet eczema arose. Cases of long standing become dry and the skin thickened, and are known as dry eczema.

Until quite recently the causes were practically unknown. Because of the stubbornness of the condition, and the vague theories as to its cause, the patience of the physician as well as of the unfortunate victim was sorely tried.

Except in these rare instances when eczema is caused by diseases involving the lymph and blood tissues, the trouble is now known to be due to three different factors. First of all, infections of the skin have to be considered. Many eczemas of the hands are due to infections with ringworm fungi and to superficial invading bacteria.

In the second place, oozing and itching eruptions on the hands, arms and neck have to be studied for external irritants. Substances used about the house or in industry, such as insect powders, chemicals, soaps and many other suspected articles are tested to see if the patient's skin is sensitive to them. Local treatment is carried out by the physician while the necessary studies are being pursued.

Thirdly, some widespread eczema eruptions are caused by the inhalation of certain substances, like dust, or the ingestion of certain acids. These possibilities are studied by means of skin tests and special diets.

Susan Hated to Wash Her Face Until She Got a "Kitten-Mitten."

By Alice Fox Pitts.

SUSAN hated to wash her face until, for her birthday, Aunt Mary sent her a kitten-mitten wash cloth.

The mitten was cleverly fashioned from two thicknesses of turkish toweling, perky ears upstanding, with eyes, nose and mouth embroidered in outline stitch to make the kitten's face. When it was opened at the bottom, Susan's little hand slipped in easily; to wash her face by pawing it with the kitten-mitten was a delight, whereas washing with an ordinary cloth had been an ordeal.

So simple is the kitten-mitten that even the mother who is not skilled with the needle can make one. Or if Aunty wants to present an inexpensive gift to a small niece or nephew, she will find the kitten-mitten is a welcome addition to any nursery.

Woman Traffic Manager Concerned With Distant Journeyings of Others

Routes Federal Officials or Insects With Equal Care and Precision.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

TRAVEL and romance are synonomous to Mrs. Miriam Ballinger Berryhill, traffic manager of the United States Department of Agriculture.

This statement wouldn't be anything out of the ordinary if Mrs. Berryhill spent her time in sailing up fiords, crawling to the top of the Alps, and galloping over India on an elephant. But most of her traveling is done between her apartment in the Kennedy-Warren and her office in the Agriculture building.

It is the journeyings of others that make Mrs. Berryhill's days exciting. One minute she is arranging itinerary and tickets for the Secretary of Agriculture's tour of the Midwest. The next she is planning the route of a box of insects, destined for the Virgin Islands. After that she is arranging for a shipment of hogs from Norway to the United States.

But whether it's for the Secretary of Agriculture, insects, or hogs, Mrs. Berryhill says she always finds it interesting to map out a route.

Thrilling Business.

"Transportation is downright thrilling when you consider the important part it plays in the life of every person," said the curly, white-haired traffic manager yesterday in her office. "Wheels go round to bring us food, clothing, things for our homes. Other wheels go round to take us to and from work, on business trips, pleasure jaunts. And I enjoy thinking my office sets a good many of those wheels in motion."

In her light print frock and wide-brimmed hat, Mrs. Berryhill looked too pretty and fragile to cope with freighters and box cars.

"Freight boats and trains are easy to manage in comparison with men," she smiled. "When I was made traffic manager I could see some of the men resented it. They thought a woman couldn't fill the job and that she would be a nagging, fault-finding boss. So I made up my mind I would use all the tact I possessed. I asked the men for advice, I listened intently to their opinions, and I never asked anybody in the office to do any work I wasn't willing to do myself."

Successful Plan.

The plan worked. Since Mrs. Berryhill became traffic manager in 1928, the office has been a congenial, busy place. The traffic manager works so hard herself the others find themselves following her example, and streams of railroad and steamship tickets, bills of lading, and time tables go through the office day after day.

"The trouble with most women in business is they expect privileges and favors simply because they are women," said Mrs. Berryhill. "I've tried never to do that. If a woman wants to fill a man's job I believe she should receive the same treatment a man would get in that situation."

Until Mrs. Berryhill became traffic manager, the job was filled by a man, Elmer E. Forbes.

She began her Government service nearly 30 years ago as a statistical clerk in the Department of Agriculture's Crop Estimate. From there she went to the office of Accounts and Disbursements, where she began taking care of governmental travel requests.

Then Mr. Forbes was asked to organize the department's traffic office and Mrs. Berryhill was assigned to work with him. She sailed into the task with her customary enthusiasm. Soon she had learned which railroads give lower rates to the Government in return for land grants; which routes are most direct, most economical. She discovered that sometimes round-about ones are cheapest in the long run. And she learned to divide as evenly as possible Government patronage between the different railroads and steamship lines.

Secretary in Public.

"All of the Department of Agriculture's personnel, from the Secretary on down, must travel on the least expensive first-class rate," she explained. "This means they occupy ordinary space on Pullmans. If the Secretary takes a drawing room, he must pay for it himself."

"Usually the Secretary and his assistants work most of the time they are on the train. They should have privacy. Instead of that, they must talk over business matters in the presence of other passengers."

Government employes are always good-natured about traveling economically when they are on business, Mrs. Berryhill has noticed.

"And my job is to point out the most economical routes from the standpoint of time as well as of money. A few days ago I planned the entire trip of a Yale professor and a Columbia economist to the Philippine Islands.

"Not long ago a young Englishman, sent here on government business, wanted to tour the United States. I planned his route and even arranged for his trip back to England. And tomorrow? Well, Heaven knows what I'll do tomorrow. I may be arranging a trip for a botanist who is going to Brazil or I may be planning the route of a box of dates from Arabia to an experimental station in California. But whatever it is, it will have the romance of far places about it."

Whenever the Department of Agriculture has rare plants shipped from the jungle to the United States' botanical garden or whenever the Secretary of Agriculture takes a trip, it's Mrs. Miriam Berryhill who set the wheels of travel in motion.

Nudism Just American Nerves, Declares Doctor

Chicago, July 16 (U.P.).—Nudism is just another form of the great American malady, nervousness, Dr. H. C. McAlister, insurance consultant, said today.

"Noise of great cities and the complexities of the modern social system have made nervousness three times as prevalent as any other malady," he said. "It is responsible for many health fads, for much peculiar behavior and probably for the cult of nudism."

The Wimpole Street Barretts Are Up for Controversy Again

Hope Ridings Miller.

THAT "all the world loves a lover" is attested by the fact so much has been written of the courtship and marriage of Elizabeth Barrett and Robert Browning, the best example of wedded happiness in the history of literature.

Perfect as this marriage must have been in inner life, and perfect as it was in its poetical expression, there is little wonder scholars are constantly searching for ways to bring it back into the spotlight.

Perhaps this was responsible for the stage success, "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" and Virginia Woolf's whimsical "Flush." Perhaps, eagerness to focus attention once more on the famous courtship is responsible for the most recent controversy in regard to the celebrated 1847 edition of the "Sonnets From the Portuguese," Elizabeth Barrett Browning's poetic sequence, often called "the most beautiful series of love poems ever written by a woman to a man."

This edition, reputed to be the first and often known as the "Reading publication," has attracted more favorable attention than any other because it was not divulged to the public until 1880.

Yet, according to a recent discovery made by two English scholars, this celebrated edition is a forgery.

According to all hitherto accepted accounts, Elizabeth Barrett's "Sonnets From the Portuguese" were intended for her husband's eyes alone.

Many years after his wife had died, Robert Browning told Edmund Gosse, the poet, how Elizabeth eventually came to show him the famous sonnets.

In the words of Gosse: "Their custom was to write alone, and not to show each other what they had written. One day, early in 1847, their breakfast being over, Mrs. Browning went upstairs, while her husband stood at the window watching the street till the table should be cleared.

"He was presently aware of someone behind him, although the servant was gone. It made Mrs. Browning, who held him by the shoulder to prevent his turning to look at her, and at the same time pushed a packet of papers into the pocket of his coat. She told him to read that, and to tear it up if he did not like it, and then she fled again to her own room."

"I Dared Not."

Despite Browning's innate love of privacy, he recognized the universal appeal of the poems. "I dared not reserve to myself," he told Edmund Gosse, "the finest sonnets since Shakespeare's."

Then, as the story goes, Mrs. Browning finally consented to let the poems be privately printed under the supervision of her friend, Miss Mary Russell Mitford, and late in the same year, 1847, they came out under the title of "Sonnets," by E. B. B., "Not for Publication."

In 1850, however, a public edition came out with the present title, supplied by Browning, who often referred to his wife as "my own little Portuguese."

According to the report of Carter and Pollard, recently published, rumors attacking the authenticity of the 1847 printing first put them on the track of their discovery several years ago.

Delving into the study of papermaking in England, these literary detectives discovered no feasible substitute for rag paper had been hit upon until 1862, when Mediterranean esparto grass began to be used instead of rags. They found chemically treated wood pulp was not introduced until 1883.

Fabulous Prices.

They discovered the 1847 "Sonnets" was printed on paper composed almost wholly of chemical wood. Further analysis has proved all copies of the edition are worthless forgeries, although such copies sold for $1,250 each only four years ago.

Then what of Edmund Gosse's story about this edition? Was there, indeed ever a private edition? Or was the colorfully romantic touch about the sonnets being written for his eyes alone merely the product of Browning's imagination?

These questions will probably be satisfactorily answered by scholars who are already preparing replies to Carter and Pollard.

Will they succeed in giving back the romantic legend that has long enhanced the "Sonnets from the Portuguese?

The beauty of the sonnets will not be impaired even though it becomes an accepted fact they were written as much for the public as for Robert Browning. But they are a deal more romantic to those who believe they are reading something never intended for their eyes.

If You're Tall Accentuate It, Designer Says

Height Is Distinctive, Should Not Be Disguised, Is Orry Kelly's View.

HOLLYWOOD, July 16 (AP).—"Accentuate your height," says Orry Kelly, Warners' designer, when addressing tall young things who ask him what they should do about their extreme longitude.

"A tall woman has the advantage over her diminutive sisters," Kelly says, "because she has distinction. Being gifted with distinction of her stature, she should strive to individualize herself in selecting gowns, hats, and coats, and see to it that the lines of her costumes suggest grace and stateliness."

Jean Muir and Verree Teasdale, who are tall, always have clothes designed for them that make them appear their actual height. Kelly makes their clothes to accentuate the slender lines of their figures—with moulded silhouettes, high fitted waists, opulent trains, full length sleeves and luxurious furs—all of which combine to make a stately appearance even on smaller women.

Adrian Drops Fullness.

While Kelly is putting long sleeves on tall women, another Hollywood designer, Adrian, is pushing down the fullness in all arm coverings.

Sleeves are slipping, is the way he puts it. Instead of the puff being at the shoulder line as has been the mode, fullness will start below the shoulder or even below the elbow, says Adrian. The sweeping bell sleeve, he says, is designed to be a prime favorite, especially for evening wear.

Furs as well as sleeves are receiving lots of attention in the film capital. And now you must be paneled if you would be smart.

Geometric arrangements of short-pile furs, such as squirrel, mole, seal and ermine, on cloth coats are deemed in Hollywood to be more ultra for early fall wear than the all-fur wrap.

Squirrel Returns.

Squirrel, considered passe during the last few years, has a revival of popularity this season. And with good reason, since it is among the most flattering and youthful of furs; its color makes it an effective trimming, and it is adaptable to either the stiff, tailored or softer modes for formal occasions.

Royer, Fox Film stylist who sponsors the vogue for panelings of short pile furs, demonstrates the versatility of squirrel in a sophisticated suit designed for Drue Leyton's role in "Charlie Chan in London." Of steel-blue wool in tunic length, the coat has full length front rectangular panels of gray squirrel. The narrow turnover collar has the fur tied with an Ascot of blue wool. The sleeves, of the same fur, are gathered tightly at the wrists.

With the coat, Miss Leyton wears a blue cloth skirt and a squirrel-gray blouse in satin. Miss Leyton, who is blonde, has been provided with a tricky brimmed chapeau of navy felt, with shallow crown to top her paneled suit.

Four Rare Animals May Come to Zoo

Expedition in Search of Tibetan Pandas.

Four extremely rare animals, wild pandas, will be at home in Washington's National Zoological Park if an expedition to Asia, headed by Lawrence T. K. Griswold, archeologist, is successful.

Mr. Griswold plans to sail with eight men on a fishing schooner in September. The party will proceed to Tibet, the only place in the world where live pandas, sometimes called Himalayan bearcats, can now be found. The archeologist hopes to bring back eight specimens, four for the New York Zoological Park, and four for the National Zoological Park.

In addition to Tibet the expedition will visit Borneo, Indo-China, New Guinea, the Pitcairn Islands, Bolivia and Guatemala, returning to the United States in about two and a half years.

Browning's "Own Little Portuguese"

Were the love sonnets of Elizabeth Barrett Browning written for the public or only for her husband? This question arises as a result of a recent controversy regarding the 1847 privately printed edition of "Sonnets From the Portuguese."

This BUSINESS of LIVING

Diplomacy Prevails When Argument Fails in Marriage.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am a woman of 24, married to a man of 55. I was clerking in a store at the time of my marriage, and although it was my earnest wish to give up my job, have children and devote myself to my home and family, my husband overruled me. He has a good job himself, but he insists I go on working so that we can put a regular sum in the bank every month.

* * * *

The reason he gives it that he won't be able to work many years longer, but he says nothing about my ever stopping work.

If it should happen that I must go on working, I would prefer giving up my present job and going to another city, where my brother-in-law is in business. He has offered me a much better paying position. My husband has flatly refused to consider such a move, however.

* * * *

Since there seems little hope my husband will ever consent to my having children, or will ever try to see anything much from my point of view, would I do right to leave him?

My parents say I would be doing wrong, since he is a faithful husband who has given me no real grounds for divorce. What do you think? T. H.

Try Again.

DEAR T. H.: Too bad you hadn't a more definite understanding of what your husband expected of you as a wife, before you said, "I do." Personally, I incline to that school of thought which holds marriage as an inviolable contract, for better or for worse, and believe, when it turns out not particularly for the better, that marriage can at least become a proving ground of one's essential strength.

* * * *

However, when a husband stubbornly denies his wife's desire to have children, that is no small matter. Nor can one readily condone a man who holds his wife to a wage earner's role when he could assume her support. As for his refusal to permit you to take a job in another city, that is his husbandly prerogative.

The situation sums up to this: Since the time of Eve, woman has been confronted with the challenge of winning the man of her choice over to her point of view. If she hasn't the initiative or the wit to do it, she usually lives to see some other woman accomplish what she thought couldn't be done.

* * * *

When one as young and untried as you bewails the fact her husband won't do this, and she can't make him do that, I am inclined to think she is confessing an inadequate technique in managing him.

Try again. Assume an understanding acceptance of his point of view. Men go by such contraries that if he thinks you wouldn't have a child if you could, and wouldn't give up your job for anything in the world, he may develop a sudden zeal for seeing you do both.

* * * *

A famous commentator has said that woman gains complete mastery over man when she surrenders to him completely. And by seeming to surrender your will to his in these two instances, you may gain more than by the most determined and logical presentation of your case.

A word of warning in conclusion: Unless you resolve your present personality conflict with your husband, do you think it wise to invite the responsibility of children? There is plenty of time yet for you to have them. M. H.

Never Fidget; It Indicates a Lack of Poise

Fumbling With Belt, Hair or Beads Is Irritating to Others.

By Frances Mangum.

ON YOUR list of things "not to do" write in bold-face letters "don't fidget."

Webster says to fidget is to move about uneasily as if restless. But that is putting it mildly. The fidgety woman is usually the one without poise. When she enters a room filled with people she is immediately seized with the "fidgets." She fumbles with the belt on her dress, fools with her hair, or fingers the beads around her neck. She stands on one foot, then the other. When she sits down she beats a tattoo on the arm of her chair or taps the floor with her foot. She takes out hairpins and replaces them, turns the rings on her fingers, and indulges in a thousand needless little activities.

Plucking Rose Petals.

If you have pretty hands use them to advantage. Don't fidget with them. Mme. de Stael, realizing her hands were her best features, used them as flatteringly as possible, used them so well that many people were never conscious of her homely face, but were left with an impression only of her lovely white hands. She would hold a rose gracefully between her thumb and third finger, and while talking would slowly and almost automatically pluck petal after petal from the flower.

That would hardly suit the modern woman who might look slightly ridiculous over tea or cocktails plucking petals from a rose and scattering them over her hostess' floor. But she can learn graceful gestures, graceful ways of holding her hands and employ these to efface the "fidgets."

Maybe A Cigarette.

If she finds her hands are in the way she should fold them in her lap and forget them. Or she may smoke a cigarette if this helps her retain balance. But she must be wary of taking one cigarette after another for that is only a form of fidgeting.

Before she leaves the mirror she should make sure there are no loose ends. Pins, clips, straps, and belts should all be securely fastened. Her hair should be up to stay. If she has long hair and wears it in a knot at the back of her head she will find that a light invisible hair net will help keep it in place.

These things scrupulously attended to leave no cause for fidgeting and fumbling.

Answer These.

1. What noted Polish woman chemist did most of her work in France? How is her name pronounced?

2. What is the error in this sentence: "I shall be happy to advise with you on this subject."

3. What is onomatopoeia and how is it pronounced?

4. How do you pronounce the name of the author of "Death Comes For the Archbishop?"

5. Is Cleopatra properly called Cle-o-PAY-tra or Cle-o-PAT-ra?

Check Here.

1. Marie Curie, born Marie Sklodowska. Her name is pronounced Ker-REE.

2. You advise persons, but you don't advise with them. This verb should never be followed by the preposition with.

3. Onomatopoeia is the use of words in which the sound is suggestive of the sense. It is also the formation of words in imitation of a sound, such as buzz and cuckoo.

4. Willa Cather's name is pronounced to rhyme with lather, as used in shaving.

5. Cle-o-PAY-tra is correct, never Cle-o-PAT-ra, although the latter is often heard.

Geyser Is Efficient 'Kerchief Laundry

Boils Them and Returns to Rightful Owner.

Handkerchiefs tossed by park visitors into the geyser are sucked down one opening, churned about in the boiling depths, then tossed out through a different opening. Only once has Little Handkerchief's perfect record of efficiency in washing and returning handkerchiefs been marred. On that memorable occasion a hanky was held back during two eruptions. But in the course of the third one, it was returned to its owner.

An average washday for New Handkerchief Geyser consists of 50 pieces, ranging from dabs of lace to big red bandannas. The biggest day's washing since the geyser was discovered two years ago consisted of 150 handkerchiefs.

Walter Pitkin to Head Magazine for Women

New York, July 16 (Spl.).—Author, journalist and teacher, Walter B. Pitkin is still looking for other worlds to conquer. Now he has turned to editorship and will head the staff of a new weekly magazine for women, The New York Woman, which will make its initial appearance in September. The magazine is being designed specifically for the women of New York City who, according to Mr. Pitkin and his staff, are a "species apart and unlike all other women of America."

Local Wagnerian Singer Hopes for Capital Opera

By Elizabeth Young.

TWENTY pounds she had lost, but none of her ardent impatience with America's deprecatory attitude toward its cultural possibilities.

Emma Redell, world famous Washington-born singer of Wagnerian roles, whose talk before the Woman's National Press Club last December on "A New Deal for American Arts and Artists" may result in a Government subsidized opera house in the Capital, was in town for the week-end.

Plans for Federal Sponsorship.

"So far as I know, this has never been made public," she confided. "Senator Sheppard, of Texas, read of my talk before the newspaper women and asked me to his office to discuss detailed plans for Federal sponsorship of operatic and allied musical arts in the United States. So impressed was he with its practical possibilities he proposed to introduce a bill in the Senate, creating funds for the project. You will hear of it at the next session of Congress.

"Senator Copeland, too, is in favor of such a plan. I understand he is sponsoring a bill to set aside Government ground on which would be built a National music conservatory for training artists to sing in a National opera house."

Only by making it possible for American artists to find year-round employment and appreciation in their own country can America hope to develop a culture rooted in native soil and comparing favorably with that of other nations, Miss Redell believes.

Foreign Star Problem.

"And this opportunity the American artist will never find while culture, so-called, is offered as a social or commercial undertaking rather than as an educational and artistic enterprise, as it should be," she said with conviction.

"One hears that in San Francisco, in St. Louis, municipal opera houses are being built. But instead of employing American singers, they will bring over a few stars from Europe, and those only for a two are three weeks' season.

"Having received training in their own countries, foreign stars can not be expected to interpret Americana music for Americans; nor can they have the interest in furthering operatic or concert art in America that our native artists might have.

"Culture which reflects the life and the traditions of a nation must have its roots in the country, either from the creative or from the interpretative standpoint. From the creative standpoint, this country is still too young to produce anything immortal; and from the interpretative standpoint we are committing the unpardonable sin of depending upon the star system: the system of importing foreign artists."

Miss Redell hopes to see the day when opera in America will be completely divested of the atmosphere of snobbery which now surrounds it. She hopes opera will come to represent simply a means of giving music to those who appreciate and need it; that prices will be within the reach of all; that the masses of the people will not feel an obligation to dress in conformity with the custom established by wealthy music patrons, or stay way; and, particularly, that opera stars will not be forced, through practical concession to snobbery, to sustain an aura of synthetic glamour.

Although an opera singer herself, Miss Redell does not maintain opera is the highest form of interpretative music.

"Rather, opera is a great training school for developing understanding and appreciation of chamber and symphonic music, which represents music in its highest forms," she said.

ISA GLENN, the novelist, is thinking of forsaking cocktail parties and becoming a recluse because of an embarrassing habit of forgetting names, rank and titles of the famous she used to know when.

"How many important people have you forgotten?" asked an amused bystander after she had committed several blunders at one party.

She is engaged in writing a novel about the "Cave Dwellers," as Mark Twain characterized the old residential set here. Strangely enough, it is the first time that she has ever attempted a novel of Washington life. The scenes of most of her novels have been laid in the Orient, where she lived for many years during periods when her husband was assigned to Far Eastern posts. "Mr. Darlington's Dangerous Age" and "East of Eden," are a couple of hers.

The Johnson Episode.

At a cocktail party not long ago, she was delighted to meet a woman she had known as a girl whose father was an Army colonel.

"Why, Helen Kilbourne," she exclaimed, embracing her. "You have changed hardly at all. I would have known you anywhere."

"I hope you are not married to Gen. Johnson," Miss Glenn said playfully.

"You know my husband," the friend answered with a gleam in her eye. "Don't you remember 'Sep' Johnson, the cadet who sat next to you at a luncheon at my house when father was an instructor at West Point?"

"Of course, I remember 'Sep', the handsome devil," exclaimed Miss Glenn. "I'd love to see him again. Is he here with you?"

At another cocktail party a lean-faced individual approached her and said affably, "how do you do, Miss Glenn. Don't you remember me?"

"Of course, I remember you," answered Miss Glenn, effusively, but for the life of her she could not remember the man's name, although that smiling, somewhat saturnine face was unforgettable. In an effort to cover her confusion and merely to make conversation she said, "and what are you doing in Washington? I hope you are not looking for a job, like so many."

"No. I'm not looking for a job," the man smiled. "I had one before I came."

"What kind of a job is it?"

"Secretary to the President," answered Marvin McIntyre.

Club Federation Makes Move For Crime Control Cooperation

A FORWARD - LOOKING citizens' movement for the control of crime was started yesterday at a conference called by the General Federation of Women's Clubs at its headquarters at 1734 N street.

The movement is timely because of the Ashurst-Sumner law passed by the recent Congress permitting the States to enter into agreements for the enforcement of their criminal laws.

Among the 17 groups represented were the American Public Welfare Association, the American Legion, the National Education Association and the American Red Cross.

William Stanley, assistant to the Attorney General, was the principal speaker. Contending this country does not need a Scotland Yard, Mr. Stanley stressed the point it does need closer cooperation between the States. He particularly urged this cooperation in order that information at the Department of Justice could be made of more value in combatting crime. He pointed out law enforcement was a State problem and called for unified plans working similarly in all States. Mr. Stanley said the Attorney General would hold a conference in regard to this subject in November, at which representatives from all States would be present.

A forum discussion, in which many took part, followed Mr. Stanley's talk. The following resolution was drawn up by the conference at the close of the meeting.

"Whereas the Ashurst-Sumner bill granting the consent of Congress to any two or more States to enter into agreement or compact for cooperative effort and mutual assistance in the prevention of crime and for other purposes was enacted by the Seventy-third Congress, therefore be it resolved that the members of this conference group assembled July 16, 1934, at the invitation of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, recommend to their constituencies and other similar civic groups that they utilize the opportunity that this legislation offers for great National service to the end that public opinion in the respective States be aroused to take advantage of this act for the cooperation with law enforcement and other agencies for crime control."

Radio Waves and Ripples

RAVEN-haired, girlish-figured Arlene Francis, now very much a star as C. B. S.'s radio mimic, first directed her dark brown eyes at a microphone about a year ago.

Within a few months she had impersonated movie personalities of such widely divergent characteristics, mannerisms, emotional traits and voices as Lupe Velez, Claudette Colbert, Evelyn Venable and Bette Davis. 'Twas all done with plenty of zip and fire. Columbia knew they had a "find."

But Arlene had tried her hand, brain and personality at nearly everything faintly connected with grease paint and amber spots before she blossomed as a mike star. Children's playlets, neighborhood dramatics, Broadway bits, posing for painters and even a term at gift shopping sustained her until we noticed a C. B. S. photograph not long ago of "Arlene Francis."

Mi Gosh! We looked a little closer. Was it the same girl? We thought we remembered her during our callow youth as the girl "in our town" who swept along accompanied by a growlish-swank-looking Russian wolf hound. Well! It was. And she was known to us boys then as Arlene Kazanjian.

She appeared betimes in exotic Parisan things that formed suitable conversation for local dowagers. She stole the show during local "play contests." She made mysterious visits down town. "Rehearsing," she said. And Charley Chambers, whose brilliant illustrations you've seen in many a magazine and on countless billboards, asked her to come over to his studio one day. He said ecstatic things about her unusual coloring.

That was during college days and our first rash hounding of city editors. However, Arlene was conscientiously hounding casting directors and studio offices. And now here she is along with Columbia's famous array . . . a full-fledged radio personality.

We played the King in "Hamlet" once. But, alas. It's too late . . . and think of all the typewriters that would have been saved.

WITH a copy of "The Voice of Experience" under one arm, golf clubs under the other, the mainstay of this department, known to you as creator of the Aunt Sadie-Uncle Lemuel series, slid out of town Saturday Toledo bound for a two week's respite from radio.

This leaves us with a drawer full of delightful publicity handouts and the gotta-get-a-girl-for-Dick Powell contest current at WJSV. Our alter ego, now playfully splashing about in the waters of Lake Erie, found time before he left to view the array of unabashed timidity—otherwise known as local radio talent—pouring golden strains into the local Columbia mike.

He even took a turn at judging. So did we. During last week's auditions the 201st applicant was squeaking into the mike. Arch MacDonald, WJSV sports announcer, was on the air at the same time from an adjoining studio. An engineer, thinking probably of the heat and of several cool ones at Joe's, threw the wrong switch. And the judges heard:

"Don't let a stranger pet you . . . strike two . . . don't let your love go wrong . . . strike three . . . don't let your love upset you . . . you're out."

Which sentiments coincided exactly with those of the judges. The gal, of course, didn't know she was sharing the loudspeaker with comments on baseball.

A LITTLE exercise in goose flesh and spine shivers entitled "Special Treat," a radio drama, will be heard today over N. B. C. networks at 2:30 p. m.

Submitted to N. B. C. by an unknown writer, the script received immediate attention and the broadcast was arranged. It concerns the dramatic adventures of a young prospector and his wife during a night of horror spent as the unwilling guests of a mountain ranger and his imbecile sister.

Sounds bad! Reminds us of that thriller where the villain said: "Alone in my slimy cave I live with lizards and toads and cut off their legs and hear 'em yell."

Ripples.

Ben Bernie and "all the lads" go off the air after tonight's broadcast at 8 o'clock on WRC. Nellie Revell, radio raconteur, newspaper woman and N. B. C. interviewer, returns to the air today at 1:45 p. m. (WMAL) with her series of intimate chats with radio celebrities . . . Three members of the Roosevelt family, distantly related to the President, will be heard today in a program of music and adventure from 5:45 to 6 p. m. on an N. B. C. network. 'T will be Oliver, banker; Emily, opera soprano; and Andre, author, explorer and producer of "Goona Goona" . . . "The Black and Ugly Wind," newest of Crime Clews dramas, today at 7 p. m. (WMAL). The sleuths encounter a secretive mind which conceives a murder trap that might have literally reduced the entire Gaspe Peninsula to sackcloth and ashes . . . Goldman's Band heard at 7:30 p. m. (WMAL) with group of favorite marches by Sousa, including "Hands Across the Sea," "El Capitan," "Our Flirtations," "The Thunderer" and "High School Cadets."

TIME is getting short! Columbia's gotta-getta-girl-for Dick Powell contest closes locally tomorrow. Auditions continue today at 10 a. m. and 3 p. m.

After that WJSV will play host for the regional elimination of this district—Winston-Salem, N. C.; Durham, N. C.; Philadelphia, Atlantic City, Baltimore, Roanoke, Va., and Washington, D. C.—from which one gal will be chosen to go to New York to compete with eleven other gals for the grand finale sometime next month.

Harry Butcher, WJSV general manager, still looks happy, too. Says that Washington has an excellent chance of furnishing a new radio star for the part

Woman Retracts Story She Swallowed Poison

Danville, Va., July 16 (Spl.).—Miss Beatrice Livingston, of Huntington, W. Va., who told Dr. J. E. BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

They All Go South for the Winter.

Turtle soup isn't such bad food on a crisp October day, and a nice mountain trout is right good eating even for a bear or a monkey or a 'possum. Any way, that's what the folks around Bettie Bear's dinner table thought, and they didn't mind telling her so. It always pleased Betty a sight to tell her how good a cook she was, but she would say that she couldn't do any good cooking if she didn't have such good hunters and fishermen around. And that pleased the men-folks and so everybody was happy.

It did seem almost foolish for the boys to go back down to the Creek as long as the weather kept so cool and there was so much to eat. And there was still enough grass for Hee-Haw to get along pretty well on, and he wasn't in any big hurry to go back to Mr. Man, even if he wouldn't have very much work to do. It was pretty nice to just lazy around up here with Blackie and the others, and it wasn't work at all to go out and haul a deer in. That was about as much fun for a donkey as playing football is for a boy. But Chatter Squirrel and Jay Bird were both restless sort of creatures and neither can stay in one place but a little while, so they decided to go to the Creek and let the others come when they got ready.

So one morning they got an early breakfast and started down the mountain. They traveled together pretty well, for they both like to hop along a little and then stop and look around. But they were mighty good chums, and they enjoyed the trip of two days before they got to their homes on the Creek.

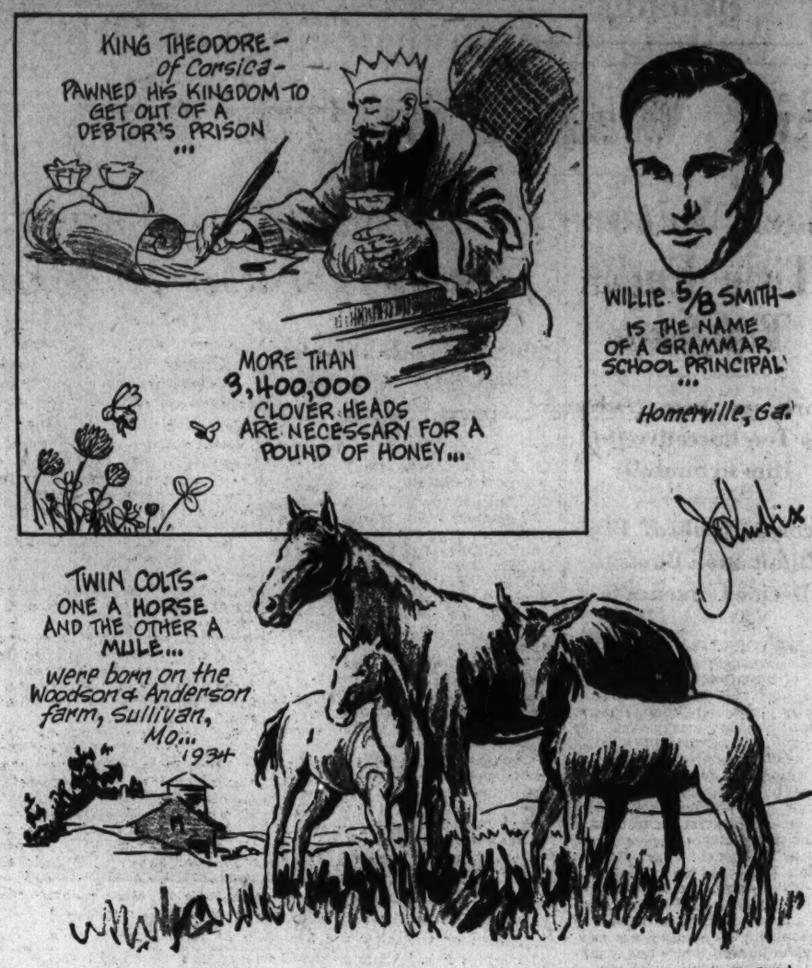

The next day Jay Bird went over to Mr. Man's house to see what he was doing. The first thing he heard got him terribly excited. Uncle Joe was over there talking to Mr. Man and he promised to take him to town next Monday to buy a donkey and wagon. There was no time to lose, if Hee-Haw wanted to come back home. So Jay Bird spread his wings, and before night he was back at Mountain House with the news. There was nothing to do but

Theodore, King of Corsica, was born Theodor Stephan von Neuhof, son of a German nobleman in service of the French. He came to be a traveler and advanturer, serving first in the French army, later in the army of Sweden until he was enlisted by the latter country for diplomatic missions.

Reaching Spain he married the daughter of a nobleman, then ran away to France with her jewels. After a lapse of time during which he lived in poverty, Emperor Charles VI made him charge d'affaires at Florence. There he fell in with several Corsican patriots who invited him to become their king. He went to Corsica in 1736 and was proclaimed king as Theodore I.

With the aid of the Dey of Algiers he defeated the Genoese, but later, while he was in Holland seeking assistance, the French came to the aid of the Genoese and Theodore fled from his kingdom. He wandered through Europe for a number of years, seeking aid for his country, but was eventually thrown in prison in London for his debts. In order to get out he had to put up his kingdom as security. He died a few years later without ever returning to Corsica.

Baer Vetoes Title Fight Till June

Work on Stage, Screen Is Too Lucrative for Him to Snub It.

Garden, Notified, Plans Elimination Bouts to Decide Contender.

NEW YORK, July 16 (AP).—Max Baer, heavyweight champion of the prize ring, motion pictures, night clubs and vaudeville circuits, formally notified Madison Square Garden today that he's done with the cruder of his arts until next June.

He informed John R. Kilpatrick, president of the corporation, through his manager, Ancil Hoffman, in a telegram from Boston that he does not propose to defend his title until next June.

When Max knocked Primo Carnera off the throne his first thought was to fight again this summer, wind up the contract the Garden holds on him for one more match, and give himself over next summer to the promotional efforts of his pal and sponsor, Jack Dempsey.

Few Challengers.

But so lucrative have become the champion's sidelines and so small the circle of prominent challengers that he decided today—the last under his agreement with the Garden—to devote himself to other forms of entertainment and money making until June. Hoffman wired Kilpatrick as follows:

"As per our agreement, I am notifying you today that I do not think there is a challenger of sufficient strength at the present time that the public would support in September as an opponent for Max Baer in a title match. Now that you have plenty of time I hope you will build up a worthy opponent who will help bring the fight game back as Max Baer has done his part."

Johnston at Work.

With money rolling in to the champion from vaudeville work and a contract just signed for three motion pictures, the Garden officers gladly took him at his word and went to work on the proposition they've wanted all the while.

Jimmy Johnston, boxing manager there, immediately decided that he'd form a "big four" of challengers—Steve Hamas, Carnera, Art Lasky and the winner of the coming Walter Neusel, Max Schmeling fight in Germany.

Johnston hopes to pair off these four as headliners of a couple of outdoor shows this summer, with the second division of heavyweights, Tommy Loughran, Kingfish Levinsky, Ray Impellittiere, Johnny Risko and so forth, appearing on the supporting cards and subject to promotion without notice to the first division as reward for unusual performance. The man with the best final showing would get the Baer match in June.

Olin Faces Rosenbloom.

With the uncertainty as to Baer's plans finally removed, though his decision of today was generally expected, the Garden perked up and decided to do somehting about the light heavyweight situation other than issuing statements regarding the qualifications of Enzo Fiermonte, society's favorite, as a title challenger.

Johnston accepted the two challengers certified by the State Athletic Commission, Bob Olin, of New York, and Georgia Joe Knight, and decided the first named would take on Rosenbloom in a title go at the Garden bowl August 15. On the supporting card he hopes to pair John Henry Lewis, Oregon Negro, and Tony Shucco, of Boston, both of whom have whipped Rosenbloom twice in overweight matches, with the winner getting the next title chance. He will add additional support to the card with a match between Mike Belloise, of New York, and Baby Arizmendi, Mexican champion, for the New York State featherweight title.

Sauer Under Knife.

Lincoln, Nebr., July 16 (AP).—George Henry Sauer, Nebraska's All-American full back, underwent an emergency operation for relief from appendicitis last night. The operation was believed to remove any chance of Sauer playing in the game of 1933 college senior foodball stars against the Chicago Bears August 31.

U. S. Picks Cup Team; Snub Arouses Allison

Stoefen Vies in Doubles; Play With Australia Opens Saturday.

By Gayle Talbot.

LONDON, July 16 (AP).—Capt. R. Norris (Dick) Williams today passed over Wilmer Allison, called to England in a frantic last minute SOS, and named his four original team members, Frank X. Shields, Sidney B. Wood, jr., Lester Stoefen and George M. Lott, jr., to start the interzone Davis Cup series against Australia at Wimbledon Saturday.

The commission so irked Allison that he quit practice, packed his kit and announced he was returning home on the Europa Wednesday if he could find his missing passport or get a new one.

"What particularly disappoints me is the fact that they pulled me away from home just at the height of the season," he said. "If Williams thought Stoefen looked good enough to play after he and Lott won the doubles title at Wimbledon he had plenty of time to tell me to stay home, as my boat didn't leave until 12 hours after the result was known. It's a long trip to take for nothing."

Allison was called to London after Lott had demanded of Williams that either he or John Van Ryn be called on to pair with him in doubles. Stoefen in early play had looked none too impressive, but he improved at Wimbledon and was the outstanding player on the court when he and Lott defeated Jean Boratra and Jacques Brugnon for the Wimbledon title.

Capt. Williams made no explanation of his selections, but it is no secret that he had been much impressed by Stoefen's improvement, his fine play at Wimbledon and his practice since.

Shields and Wood, the singles players of the 1931 team, had been generally picked as America's two probable singles players after their fine showing in the Wimbledon semifinals.

Both lost, Shields to Jack Crawford, the Australian ace, and Wood to Fred Perry, Wimbledon champion and leader of the cup-defending English team, but only after bitterly fought five-set matches.

Crawford and the three members of the team named for the European zone final against Czechoslovakia, Vivian McGrath, Adrian Quist and Don Turnbull, also were selected for the interzone series against the United States.

Colored Bouts Here Friday Arranged

Cross Will Oppose Dixon on Suburban Gardens Fight Program.

A 34-ROUND card of all-colored boxing will be held at the Suburban Gardens Friday night, headed by a 10-round main event between Tommy Cross, of Philadelphia, and Speedy Dixon, a local lightweight.

As an amateur, Cross won the featherweight championship of Philadelphia. Since turning professional, he has scored 52 knockouts and won 36 others out of a total of 90 bouts. Speedy Dixon is a cousin of George Dixon, who held the featherweight title in the old days.

In an eight-round semifinal, Baby Kid Chocolate, of Atlantic City, and Bobby Brown, of Baltimore, will be thrown together. In a duo of sixes, Joe Rucker, of Wilmington, Del., will meet One-Punch Sammy Williams, of Jersey City, and Ted King, of Camden, will square off against Tommy Miller, of Baltimore.

Revolta's 142 Takes St. Paul Golf Play-Off

St. Paul, Minn., July 16 (AP).—Johnny Revolta, Milwaukee, won the St Paul Open Golf Championship today by defeating Ky Laffoon, Denver, and Harry Cooper, Chicago, in an exciting 36-hole playoff.

Revolta's margin was one shot, outscoring Laffoon 142 to 143. Cooper scored 145.

Wimbledon's Racquet Play A Racket

High-Geared Commercial Machine Reaps Profit of $200,000.

By Henry McLemore.

LONDON, July 16 (U.P.). — The sternest opposition to open tennis championships always has and always will come from that powerful body, the All-England Lawn Tennis Ground, Ltd., controllers of Wimbledon.

And no wonder, for in the great plant which is Wimbledon it has the biggest money-making show in London, if not in the world. Each annual two weeks of play produces a clean profit of anywhere from $150,000 to $200,000.

Absolutely No Waste.

There is absolutely no waste. Wimbledon is probably the only major tournament where players are not advised in advance when they are to play. To furnish such advice would entail the engagement of a clerical staff, the payment of postage. So the players are told they must read the papers for this information.

The entrance fees are higher than anywhere else, and the food furnished the players in the club tearoom is limited to three items, cold salmon, cold cuts, and fruit salad. Nothing hot, for hot foods would require chefs and the installment of ovens.

The ticket allowance to players is niggardly and getting more niggardly with the passing of each year.

The only serious money spent is that for the traveling and hotel expenses of the visiting stars. It is money wisely spent, however, for a foreign ace will draw enough customers through the gates to pay his "hire" a hundred times over.

The Geese That Lay——"

One English lawn tennis critic, in writing of Wimbledon and its riches, called the amateurs the "geese that lay the golden eggs." It is the perfect description. For two weeks the boys and girls work and sweat under a broiling sun to enrich the coffers of an organization which, to this observer anyway, has but one connection with amateurism—the exploitation of amateurs.

And what's true of Wimbledon is true of similar tennis organizations throughout the world. The Davis Cup was a gold mine for the sporting club which owns and operates the Stade Roland Garros in Paris. The national championships in America enabled the West Side Tennis Club to erect that fine and imposing stadium in Forest Hills.

No Transgressions.

And the funniest part of the whole business is the way in which the tournament officials demand that competitors observe the amateur code right down to the last letter. Let one of the players try and make a little money for himself, and out he goes.

Taking it anyway you like, the whole set-up is one that would delight the heart and draw the praise of the smoothest racketeer and muscle man. Just try and think of anything sweeter, any softer touch, than having a business where the world's most skilled workmen in their line contributed their services to you free

Nats Victors In Detroit, 10 to 8

beginning, Hamlin stayed on until the sixth. The defeat was blamed on Auker, however, who parted with two runs in the big seventh before leaving.

Both teams scored in the first, Detroit on Gehringer's double and Goslin's single; Washington on Travis' bounder to second following a pass to Schulte and Manush's single. Cronin, after juggling the batting order again, batted in fifth place, but the move failed to benefit the middle part of the batting order. All of the telling blows were struck by the upper and lower ends of the line-up.

Kress Starts Homers.

Detroit scored one in the fifth, but Washington nullified this with its home-run exhibition in the first half of the sixth. Harris walked after Cronin lined to White, and Kress proceeded to bunt a high fly over the center-field scoreboard.

Sewell followed with another lusty swat back of the same board and Hamlin went to the showers. Auker replaced him and succeeded in retiring Crowder, but Schulte started the fireworks again with a third circuit-clout back of the scoreboard.

The Tigers in their half of the sixth mixed Owen's double with hits by Gehringer, Greenberg, Cochrane and a pass to Rogell to regain their one-run advantage.

But the Nats had just begun. They dragged out their riot clubs in the seventh and went to work on Messrs. Auker and Marberry in a manner that would have shamed a good, honest New York cop working on some Communist domes. Travis started with a drive that skidded under Owen's legs into left field for one base. He completed the circuit on Cronin's double down the left-field line. Joe marked time while Harris rolled to Owen and then flashed the hit-and-run sign as Sewell came to bat after Kress walked. It worked perfectly, and so did Cochrane's thumb, indicating the showers for his hurler.

Burke Slams Triple.

Fearless Fred Marberry, a big hulk of a man who once starred in a relief role for Washington, strode into the box as the crowd, which had been pleading and shouting for him, went wild with joy. The first batter to face him was anemic Bob Burke, who staggered to the plate with an oversize toothpick on his shoulder.

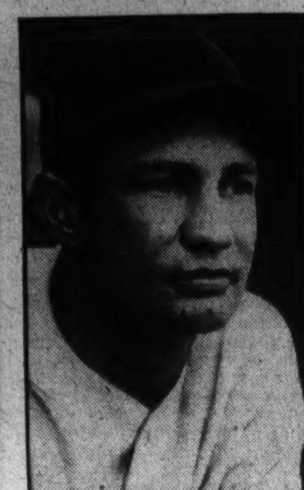

Fearless Fred glared down upon bashful Bobby, lifted his long leg up over his shoulder and fired a speed ball right down the alley. Bashful Bobby timidly pushed a triple down the right-field line, and two more runs trickled over the pan. Burke scored a few pitches later as Myer bunted another speed ball into center for a single.

A's Lose, 3 to 2, Box Duel to Browns

Newsom and Cain in Pitchers' Battle; St. Louis Rallies to Win.

ST. LOUIS, July 16 (AP).—Buck Newsom won the decision in a pitchers' battle here today with "Sugar" Cain, the Browns defeating the Athletics, 3 to 2.

Newsom was touched for two hits and as many runs in the first inning. The hits, with a pass to Foxx and a double steal by Foxx and Higgins, accounted for the scores. Then the St. Louis hurler tightened.

Cain limited the Brownies to one hit in the first four innings, but Hornsby's men tied the score in the fifth and won the game in the sixth when Melillo singled, went to second on Finney's error, and scored on Strange's single to center.

Jockey Fernandez Rides Three Detroit Victors

Detroit, July 16 (AP).—The claimers monopolized today's eight-race card at the Michigan State Fair Grounds, with all purses set at $800. Jockey F. Fernandez, one of the outstanding riders of the present meeting, had another good day, riding winners in the first, fourth and sixth.

The sixth attracted some of the better talent among the 3-year-olds and up, Fernandez riding All Rowes to a victory in that race over the mile course. Not counted as a dangerous contender, All Rowes returned $15.40 for a $2 ticket. In the fourth Fernandez had piloted Merry Caroline, a 7-to-1 shot, to win at six furlongs.

Sunday Baseball Moral Necessity, Cleric Testifies

Martinsville, Va., July 16 (Spl.).—A minister of the gospel held today in open court that Sunday baseball is a "moral necessity" and Magistrate George West dismissed a warrant against C. D. Parvis, charged with charging admission for a public event on Sunday. The case grew out of the game yesterday at Fieldale between an all-star team of the Bi-State League and the Greensboro team in the Piedmont League.

Jarvis, shortstop on the Fieldale team, accepted bonus for the game, which drew nearly 4,000 fans, because it was easy for him to come to court. Kennon Whittle represented him and Commonwealth's Attorney W. R. Broaddus prosecuted the case.

C. P. Ripple, superintendent of the Marshall-Field mill at Fieldale, testified that Sunday baseball means a lot to textile workers who have no other way to spend Sunday leisure and the minister contended that watching a ball game on the Sabbath is not a pernicious evil.

The decision means that future Sunday games will be played.

Cavalcade Gets Rating Over Equipoise

Is Assigned 124 Pounds for $10,000 Handicap Race Next Saturday.

CHICAGO, July 16 (AP).—Cavalcade, the season's 3-year-old champion, was rated two pounds better than Equipoise today by Handicapper John Campbell, who assigned the Brookmeade Stable star 124 pounds for the $10,000 added handicap at Arlington Park Saturday.

The impost represented 10 pounds more than the scale for 3-year-olds. Equipoise, C. V. Whitney's star 5-year-old, was given 134 pounds, 8 pounds over the scale.

Trainer Bob Smith still declined to say whether Cavalcade will start against the older horses. Equipoise is definitely out of the event, an injury having prevented his being shipped to Arlington Park.

Other probable starters and weights: Inlander 109, Riskulus 108, Watch Him 106, Blessed Event 105, Big Beau 105, Evergold 105, Good Goods 104, Advising Anna 103, Jovius 103, Navanod 103, New Deal 103 and Frank Ormont 96.

'If I Can Beat Londos, I Will,' Says Marshall; Raps Fixing

By Frank H. Young.

"LISSEN, fellow," said Everett Marshall yesterday, in a gabfest anent his Thursday night's rassle challenge for Champion Jim Londos' title at Griffith Stadium, "if I'm the better man when we go on that mat—and I think I will be—I'm coming out of the ring with that crown on my head. I know they tell lots of jokes about rassling and say that bouts are fixed and all of that, but here's one that will be strictly on the level as far as I'm concerned and if I can throw Londos I'm going to do it."

And, who is this frail and emaciated 180-pound writer to doubt the 216-pound, perfectly built Colorado cowboy's word — especially while within reach of him?

The question was asked, however, about rumors of syndication, leagues, &c., and of Londos' reputed officership in one of the circuits, but Marshall was not at a loss in giving an answer.

Open Race for Title.

"Maybe there was a time," he said, "when Londos had an interest in one of the booking agencies—I don't know—but he's just another rassler now and has been holding his title for some time because he is the best man. It's an open race now and none of the boys fears that he will be kept out of work if he beats the Greek. The world's title will make a fellow rich and, naturally, all of the rasslers crave it. And don't worry, if I win that crown I'll be kept plenty busy answering challenges. The boys will stick along with the guy who has the championship."

While Marshall has called off all matches for the early part of this week and has been here training since Friday, Londos is rassling almost nightly. Tomorrow, the night before he takes on Marshall here, he meets Ed Don George, the only other man who now has any title claims, being recognized as king of the mat world in the New England States. Should he beat George in that Boston bout, the Greek will have a clear claim to the title when he climbs through the Griffith Stadium ropes.

Keeps in Shape in Competition.

"That doesn't mean a thing," said Marshall, when it was suggested that Londos does not appear to be taking the bout here as seriously as he might by meeting a tough title claimant the night before showing here. "Londos claims that he keeps in shape by actual bouts better than by laying off and training. He's always done that and the fact that no one has taken his title from him in years makes it look like good dope in his case.

"All I can say is that he'd better be good when he meets me or they'll be making that Washington date-line extra prominent in newspapers throughout the country next Friday morning. I was never in better condition and I'm absolutely satisfied in my own mind that I can take him."

Regarding this card, rassle addicts do not seem to be caring much about who else is listed to perform, but in case any one is interested, Earl McCready and George Hagan meet in the semifinal, with the preliminaries pitting Gino Garibaldi against Al Geicewicz, Rudy Dusek against Mike Romano and Hans Steinke against Joe DeVito.

Because of the high-priced feature, Londos alone being guaranteed $4,000, women will be assessed the full price Thursday.

Simmons Gets Two Homers; Sox Split

Boston Wins Opener, 5-4, Chicago Nightcap, 4-2; No. 20 for Bonura.

CHICAGO, July 16 (AP).—After home runs by Al Simmons and Zeke Bonura failed to make up a 4-run first inning deficit and the White Sox were edged out by Boston, 5 to 4, Simmons came back with another circuit clout to help the Chicagoans to a 4-to-2 victory in the second game today.

The Red Sox batted around in the first inning of the opener to score four runs on as many hits and two passes, which, with another run picked up in the fifth, was enough margin for Henry Johnson to withstand Chicago rallies. Trailing by three runs, the Sox closed in when Simmons homered in the seventh and Bonura followed with his No. 20 in the eighth, each with none on.

Gallant Mac Winner In Arlington Feature

Arlington Park, Ill., July 16 (AP).—Breaking on top, Gallant Mac, racing in the colors of B. B. Jones' Audley Farm, of Virginia, lugged top weight of 115 pounds to victory today in the mile feature at Arlington Park today.

Jockey Don Meade got Gallant Mac away fast and managed to keep him out in front all the way, standing off a challenge by Mrs. John D. Hertz's lightly weighted Ree John, the odds-on choice. Saint, coupled with Ree John as an entry, was third. Gallant Mac paid $7.42.

New Yorkers Half Game From Top

Winegarner, Brown and Weiland Fail to Halt Trek Over Plate.

CLEVELAND, July 16 (AP).—The New York Yankees literally walked back within one-half game to the league-leading Detroit Tigers today when six bases on balls in the ninth inning, four of them in succession, forced four runs over the plate and gave them a 7-4 victory over the Cleveland Indians while the Tigers were dropping a decision to Washington.

The Indians went into the ninth leading, 4 to 3, as a result of Hal Trosky's eighteenth home run with Earl Averill on base in the eighth inning. Without warning the Cleveland pitchers blew up completely.

Earl Combs, batting for Don Heffner, opened the inning with a double, the only hit of the frame. Red Rolfe drew a pass from Ralph Winegarner and Lloyd Brown was sent to the rescue. He managed to fan Pinch Hitter Tony Lazzeri and force Lou Gehrig to foul out, but in between and afterward he handed out three free tickets to first base and had three balls on Bill Dickey when Bob Weiland was called in.

Fourth Forced In.

Weiland threw the fourth ball to Dickey and then walked Myril Hoag, forcing in Sammy Byrd, who was "walking" for Babe Ruth, with the fourth tally. Combs, up for the second time, flied to Rice for the third out.

Johnny Allen, making his first appearance on the mound for the Yankees since being forced out of action with a lame arm May 12, received credit for the victory.

Longford Lasts to Win By a Nose at Empire

Empire City Race Track, July 16 (AP).—A featureless program opened another week of sport at the Hilltop course, with the third race attracting the best field.

Nine platers clashed over the short six-furlongs course, with Mrs. Clyde Phillips' colt, Longford, lasting to nose out the Howe Stable's gray sprinter, Scotch Gold. George Schimmel's Aileen C. was a decisively beaten third, four lengths away. Longford, a 13-to-5 second choice, covered the distance in 1:10 1-5.

Second Straight Victory Turned in by Blackbirder in Rockingham Feature Race

Winner Pays 7-1; Cops by A Length

Morning Mail Late, but Finishes Second; Wise Prince Is Third.

Victor, Slow Starter, Takes Lead in Five Stretch Run.

SALEM, N. H. July 16 (AP).—Blackbirder, a fast-stepping son of Bostonian, owned and trained by E. Silver, left seven other 2-year-olds behind today as he won his second straight race in accounting for the 6-furlong feature at Rockingham Park.

Slow to get into stride, Blackbirder closed in fast to move into second place at the head of the stretch and then stepped the pace up another notch to pull away. At the finish, he had a length to spare over A. A. Baron's Morning Mail while another two and one-half lengths to the rear trailed F. Spotola's Wise Prince. Among the also ran were S. W. Labrot's Stainforth, and P. A. Shaw's Gov. Sholtz.

In a wide open betting race, with Gov. Sholtz the lukewarm choice at 4 to 1, Blackbirder paid $15.90 for a $2 straight mutuel ticket. He ran the distance in 1:12 4-5, to earn $1,590 for his owner.

Candy Prince Early Leader.

Candy Prince, the rank outsider, was the first away from the barrier and showed the way to the top of the stretch where Stainforth stepped into command only to be supplanted by Blackbirder within a few strides. Candy Prince weakened and finished fifth behind Stainforth. Gov. Sholtz was sixth.

Cards Win Infield Fly Protest, Game With Cubs to Resume

NEW YORK, July 16 (AP).—President John A. Heydler of the National League today upheld a protest of the St. Louis Cardinals on the disputed "infield fly" ruling of Umpire Bill Klem during the Cardinals' game with the Cubs at Chicago, July 2 and ordered the game replayed from the point where the ruling was made.

The situation was this: It was the last half of the seventh inning, Chicago leading 4-1 and at bat. One was out, Lon Warneke was o third, Bill Herman on second, Woody English on first and Chuck Klei at bat. Klein hit a high fly, which first appeared to be back to fall safe in front of the foul, but which the wind blew plate.

Klem allowed Warneke to score from third and Klein to go safely to first.

The Cardinals protested that Klem should have declared Klein out on the infield fly rule and asked that the game be played over.

The Cubs contended that Klem was right since the rule reads "a fair fly ball * * * that can be handled by an infielder." They said no Cardinal infielder was in a positio to hadle it.

"As between these two arguments," Heydler ruled, regardless of how poorly this particular ball was played, I would hold the batsman is automatically out when the ball falls withinthe infield.

As to the Cardinals' request to replay the whole game, Heydler ruled that would be manifestly unfair to the Cubs as they were leading at the time.

He therefore ordered that the ame be resumed in the seventh inning with Herman on third, English on second, the score 4-2 and two out. "The run scored by Warneke will count, Heydler ruled, "as he as well as the other runners were advancing at their own risk."

PANA FRANKA had good speed, drew clear in the first furlong, but hard ridden at the end, was unable to keep pace with the winner. MYNAH, a forward factor from the start, held on stubbornly in the drive but was unable to reach the first two. SILVERDALE came gamely on the outside through the last furlong. GRACE BLOTTER faltered in the stretch run. The others were outrun. PANA KRANKA bled in the running.

JUBAL was unable to improve his position under punishment. IL TROVATORE went evenly. PRISONER went extremely wide at the stretch turn. JUSTICE LOGAN stopped and was eased up at the end.

KHAMSEEN was never far from the pace, came to the outside in the stretch and responding gamely to punishment despite bearing out, was drawing away at the last 70 yards. OLD BALDY prominently placed from the start, displaced BEDIGHT from the command, but was unable to maintain his position under punishment. BEDIGHT, hustled to the front on the inside in the opening three sixteenths, was unable to keep up with the leading pair in the last five sixteenths. CASH SURRENDER, away fast, dropped back steadily, saved ground in the stretch, but was unable to reach the leaders. ALL FORLORN weakened through the stretch. ZIPALONG was never a factor.

POSTSCRIPT slow to settle into her stride, worked her way up gradually on the outside with a rush in the stretch and was up to win in the final strides. GAILLARDIA reserved early, closed fast through the stretch, assumed a brief lead a few yards from the finish, but was unable to stave off the winner. BITTY BIT under slight restraint early, moved up fast entering the stretch, took command, but was unable to maintain her advantage under pressure. MISS MOROCCO was going strongly at the end. TOYTIME, well placed from the start, faltered in the last furlong. ZORANA lacked speed. MARCH STEP had good early speed, but weakened as if short.

BLACKBIRDER, slow to begin, moved up steadily after going the first quarter mile, closed with a rush in the stretch and was going away at the finish. MORNING MAIL restrained in pursuit of the pace, came to the outside in the stretch and closed with good energy. WISE PRICE, in the forefront from the beginning, was hard ridden through the final furlong, but was unable to keep pace in the drive. STAINFORTH, well up from the start, weakened in the last furlong. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BOOCAP, $9.50, $5.60, $3.90; RHODIUS, $6.50, $3.90; PIECEMEAL, $2.90.

BOOCAP, kept prominently placed from the start and in slight reserve for the first half mile, moved up steadily thereafter, took command in the stretch and drew out through the closing furlong. RHODIUS, racing on the outside going down the back stretch, made a determined effort to keep pace with the winner, but was not good enough. PIECEMEAL, after being kicked at post, loomed up menacingly in the stretch, but was unable to make up any ground in the final furlong. ENRO closed a big gap after trailing for the first half mile. BABOO, much used in disposing of GRAND ACRE, faltered when the real racing began. HIGH SOCKS was never able to enter into contention.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GALLIC, $7.90, $4.00, $2.50; TAUNTON, $5.60, $2.90; CALOME, $2.30.

GALLIC went to the front, straightened out on the back stretch, drew away into a long lead and was hard ridden through the stretch; held TAUNTON safe. The latter restrained for the first half mile, was kept under intermittent punishment all the last three furlongs, but was unable to reach the winner. CALOME came to the outside in the stretch, but was unable to threaten the first two and barely outlasted BLUE FOAM at the finish. The latter taken back off the pace, saved ground in the stretch and held on willingly. BRIGHT BIRD had good speed for the first half mile.

Valley League Is Topped by Culpeper

Harrisonburg Second in Race; Charlottesville Nine Disappoints.

HARRISONBURG, Va., July 16 (Spl.)—Culpeper, scoring victories over Harrisonburg and New Market, returned to first place in the Valley League during the past week and now appears fairly well entrenched with a game and a half lead over Harrisonburg.

The Harrisonburg champions lost ground by falling before New Market, but recouped some with a victory over Charlottesville. The University City lads, who opened the season with five straight wins, had a disastrous week-end, losing to both Woodstock and Harrisonburg. Earlier in the week, Charlottesville soundly trounced Woodstock, which had to play with a makeshift line-up.

Culpeper had an easy time pounding out a 10-to-2 victory over New Market Sunday, three hurlers being touched for 17 safeties.

Seventh in Row for Keister.

This week sees New Market playing a return game at Culpeper Thursday; Woodstock playing at Harrisonburg, and Charlottesville at New Market Saturday, and Culpeper performing for the first time at Woodstock Sunday.

In conquering Charlottesville, the new men added by Woodstock proved their value. Bradshaw held the losers to seven hits, and Edwards, in short, and Boltz behind the bat, performed well. They promise to capably fill the places of the Front Royal All-Star players who returned to their home team.

At the Post . . .

with Bill Bennings.

First race—Jazz Age turned in a victory for us earlier in the meeting and finds a field here that appears about right for another melon killing. Cabouse will draw much of the play and deserves consideration. There is an outsider in the group with some chance. I mean Wilrob. He has worked well, according to Clocker Mike.

Second race—I'm going to stick to Oral in this sprint. He will have the fashionable Peters in the saddle. Must give away some weight but he can do that, I do believe. Flying Don for the place and Lamp Black for show.

Third race—Little Dinah and Fake should battle it out for the main award in this field. I prefer them in the order named. Teeter Totter is a speed thing with a chance to split the top pair.

Fourth race—Little Stokes came through with a fine effort last out, as Mike had predicted and just missed gaining a purse. The price will be missing tomorrow but the speed will be there. Vote may draw the husky Workman in the saddle and demands respect. Integrity for the show.

Fifth race—Old Judge appears to have found the spot where he can reveal his ability with success. Needs a good ride to get home, however. Sambo Brown and Gabbo for the rest. Gallic, if sent back, will have a fighting chance, although he mover up a notch.

Sixth race — Lucky Prince and Jockey Walls draw the Bennings backing here. Both are fit. Silver Wrack for the place and Good Sense to show. The last named is out of Clocker Mike's trial book.

Seventh race—This is one of those hatpin races. Just stab yourself one and get on the line. Frigate Bird, Quickstep and Jim Ormont, if you must have my word.

Hook, Line and Sinker

By Jean Monk.

WE have just passed the half-nile post of the hook and line fishing season of 1934, May 1 considered the opening date and October 1, closing.

Fishing this season in salt water has risen to unexpected new high levels of importance. The Alexandria Gazette, following the example set by its Washington contemporaries, only last week added a fishing column, "Bits and Nibbles," with no less a dignitary than Judge William S. Snow will be one of its principal contributors.

Last summer Washington fishermen played ping pong with the tides till the close of the season. We wondered, we speculated, we theorized, but the tides kept ebbing and flooding, and we finally agreed that fish bite when they get ready if bait is offered.

Hopelessly Tangled.

This year the subject theatend to get under way again, but currents entered and swept it into deep water where lines became hopelessly tangled.

Too many of our recent reports of catches have skyrocketed 'way up into the hundreds. These big, inflated, overgrown reports seem entirely out of proportion with no smaller reports to off-set them. The net result is that fishermen who land only a few dozen per trip feel that they have not the slightest reason for reporting their catches.

What this column would like to have is reports of fishing trips, whether 10 or 500 fish are caught. There are many things besides mere catches of fish that are of interest to our readers. Let's have those other things.

Caught 54 Fish.

Bill Bailey, Rock Point Hotel, writes: "On Saturday, July 14, Joe Butler took out John Thomas and his party from Washington and landed 54 fish. The catch consisted of hardhead, trout, rock and perch.

"Capt. Thomas Stein on the same day piloted a party for Mr. Hugh Posey, of Indian Head, Md. They caught 45 fish, 35 hardhead, 6 trout and 4 rock.

"The Otis Elevator Union, 150 members, enjoyed their outing here on the fourteenth. They fished, swam, ate chicken dinners and played ball in the afternoon."

S. R. Diamondson, Interstate Commerce Commission, sends the following good report:

"Friday, the thirteenth, held no terrors for Lieut. Tom Mason and Johnson, of the Traffice Bureau; Sergt. McCutcheon, of the First Precinct; Detective Liverman and Examiner Diamondson, of the Interstate Commerce Commission, when it came to bringing home the bacon or rather the hardheads. In one and a half hours of fishing off the buoy near Kenwood Beach they caught 142 hardheads running three pounds and better, and one lone trout. Capt. Pearson conducted the party."

70-Minute Motor Trip.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Riverman, 3110 Wisconsin avenue, fished from Solomons last Saturday with Capt. W. F. Johnson. They went across to Hooper Island, an enjoyable 70-minute motor trip, fishing not considered. Other members of the party were Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Tuke, Mr. and Mrs. P. L. Wright, Joe Hill, William Gibson, Sam Bracken, Arthur Schwers, all of Washington, and C. K. McLowd, of Ohio.

They fished from 4 until 8 p. m. and returned with 124 large croakers, 5 trout and 1 kingwilliam perch. Some of the croakers were 3 and 4 pounders.

Did you know that Washington anglers can fish on the Virginia side of the Potomac to Alexandria without a license? I exchanged fish tales recently with Judge William S. Snow and W. Harry Johnson, game warden for the Potomac, in Judge Snow's office in Alexandria, and learned that the fisherman's District of Columbia extends from Little Falls, above Chain Bridge, to Jones Point, in Alexandria.

Roaches Run Excluded.

But Roaches Run, just across Highway Bridge, is not included. If you cast there you may be asked to reel in. Fishing in this pond is in litigation, which means that the courts are yet debating the subject. Wild ducks are at the bottom of it.

Stocks Start Week With Losing Trend

New York, July 16 (AP).—Stocks started the new week on the downgrade today as the San Francisco general strike caused increased nervousness in financial markets.

Numerous losses of 1 to around 3 points were recorded in the stock list. Liquidation was not heavy, though, for traders preferred to watch for evidence that the general strike idea would spread before relinquishing their recent attitude of hopefulness.

Shares of railroads serving the Pacific Coast were especially weak. Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, Union Pacific, Great Northern and Northern Pacific lost 1 to nearly 3 points. California Packing dropped 2¼ points.

Rails Retreat Readily.

Rails as a group retreated readily. Selling in carrier stocks was based partly on predictions that June earnings statements would not make "good reading" for shareholders.

Alcohol, motor and other industrial groups were under moderate pressure. National Distillers, American Commercial Alcohol and Schenley sold at new lows for the year on declines of 1 to about 4 points. American Sugar Refining, National Lead and U. S. Smelting reacted for losses of more than 2 points each following their climb to new peaks at the week-end.

Columbia Gas & Electric, which dropped to a new 1934 low under 10, was a pivot of further selling in utility shares. Thin markets for some preferred stocks were apparent in losses that ranged as high as 8 points.

Sales Volume Larger.

Volume on the stock exchange totaled 589,720 shares, compared with 534,560 Friday. The Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 stocks declined 1.7 points, to 77.2.

Rubber, silver and hides showed narrow mixed changes at the finish. The Moody index of spot commodity prices attained a new high for the year at 143.7.

Aside from the Pacific Coast strike news, second quarter earnings statements absorbed attention in Wall street. A preliminary Du Pont report revealed earnings in the second quarter equivalent to 96 cents a share, making earnings for the first six months $1.86 a share, compared with $1.63 in the same period last year.

Figures on the Cost of Each Homestead in the Reedsville Project Make It Evident We Can Ill Afford Such Experiments.

By Ralph West Robey.

On the basis of the figures just made public by Secretary Ickes for the Reedsville, W. Va., subsistence homesteads it is interesting to calculate the cost of this type of relief. In doing this, of course, one must bear in mind that if the plan were followed on an enormous scale the unit cost might be reduced. Even if one makes a reasonable allowance for this, however, it is apparent that the expense of such projects makes them prohibitive. On this score alone they should be ruled out. When one adds the social objections to the establishment of such homesteads by the Government, the case against them appears doubly conclusive.

In the Reedsville project, according to the statement of Secretary Ickes, 50 homesteads have been completed. For the highest priced ones the cost has been $5,571. For the lowest priced the cost has been $4,896. The average, then, has been, let us say, $5,235. This includes the house, with heat, water and lighting, a little over five acres of land, a barn and outbuildings, landscaping, and the fertilizing, plowing and planting of the land. If those occupying such a homestead do not have furniture, it is to be assumed the cost would run somewhat higher. For purposes of a general calculation, however, let us take just the $5,235.

We have now, say, some 10,000,000 unemployed. Assume that one-tenth of these, or their families, are put on homesteads. This would mean that it was decided that 1,000,000 families will be unable to adjust themselves to the economic conditions of the next few years and must be taken care of by the state. Such a conclusion, it seems to me, is utterly unwarranted, but it is modest compared with some of the statements issued from Washington.

To put 1,000,000 on homesteads would cost, if the Reedsville figures hold good, $5,235,000,000. Consider what such a sum means. It is 68 per cent more than the total receipts of the Federal Government last year. Or put it this way: If to every dollar everyone paid in taxes last year he had added another $1.68 it would have been just sufficient to cover the cost of such a project.

Were the Government to borrow such a sum, which it would do, of course, the interest at 4 per cent would amount to $209,000,000 a year. This would be an increase of 28 per cent in the carrying charges of the public debt.

Direct Cost Only Half Of the Relief Problem.

This direct cost, however, is only a part of what is required to support these families. In addition, they must be given work. It was in connection with this aspect of the homesteads, it will be recalled, that Congress rebelled. It refused to sanction building a Government factory at Reedsville. The problem was solved by getting a private organization to put up a branch plant.

What we have in these homesteads, then, is an outlay of over $5,000 for each family as a partial means of making them self-supporting. There still remains the task of getting them work—and getting them work presumably at a wage on which other labor finds it possible to live and raise families.

In view of this it is difficult to see why such projects as that of Reedsville should be considered relief, except in so far as it provides work during its construction. Beyond this it appears to be sheer philanthropy—the wasting of taxpayers' money because it will be "nice" to make these West Virginia families more comfortable. When the Government already is spending $2.28 for every dollar it receives, it seems scarcely the proper time for such extravagance.

Bond Market Closes Lower In Light Sales

Stocks Blamed in Decline of Prices; Sales Cut to $9,198,000.

New York, July 16 (AP).—Secondary issues were in moderate supply in today's bond market and closing prices were irregularly lower.

The declines were largely attributed to sympathy with stocks. While the news of the general strike in San Francisco did not do the market any particular good, it was not especially depressing to the prime investment groups, most of which held around their recent record high levels.

Trading activity was again relatively low. Transfers totaled only $9,198,000, par value, against $9,764,000 last Friday. The Standard Statistics Co. average for 60 domestic corporate loans eased two-tenths of a point to 87, its first recession since July 3.

On Gaining List.

Among the gainers were Alleghany Corporation 5s of 1944, up ¾ at 70; American Telephone Debenture 5s, up ¼ at 111¼; Chesapeake & Ohio General 4½s up ½ at 110¾; Cleveland Union Terminal 4½s, up ¼ at 94¼; Consolidated Coal 5s, up 2½ at 25½; Laclede Gas 5s, up 1 at 96; North American 5s, up ¼ at 90¾; Reading 4½s, up 2⅜ at 106¾; Sinclair Oils 7s, up ⅜ at 104¼; Standard Oil of New Jersey 5s, up ¼ at 106¼, and U. S. Rubber 5s, up ½ at 86¾.

Other Rails Off.

N. Y. Central convertible 6s, off ⅜ at 116¼; Louisville & Nashville uniform 4s, off 1¼ at 103¾; International Telephone 5s, off 1¼ at 64; Hudson Coal 5s, off 1⅛ at 48¾; Erie 5s of 1975, off 1¼ at 73; Columbia Gas 5s, off ¾ at 90; Chicago & North Western 4¾s, off 1⅝ at 35; Chesapeake Corporation, 5s, off 1½ at 104¼; Santa Fe General 4s, off ⅝ at 105⅛; American Water Works 5s, off ¼ at 105, and American & Foreign Power 5s, off ⅞ at 50⅛.

U. S. Government securities were rather listless and slightly lower. The Young and Dawes plans obligations of Germany were heavy on declaration of the Reich government that interest payments would not be possible in view of exchange difficulties and trade balances.

The former lost 2⅜ points at 36½ and the latter were off 3 at 49½. Japanese issues firmed.

Curb's Prices Driven Down Under Selling

Utilities and Alcohols in Offerings List; Sales, 121,000 Shares.

New York, July 16 (AP).—A moderate selling wave carried most curb stocks lower today. Offerings were particularly effective among utilities and alcohols. Metal shares, alone, resisted the downward trend.

The lower drift in prices developed shortly after the opening. Volume increased slightly in the last hour. Phillip Morris (new) was an isolated firm spot although its advance was pared after moving up 1¼ points for a new 1934 high. Lake Shore, Tech Hughes and Wright Hargraves were steady at the finish.

General Tire & Rubber sagged 3 points on small offerings. Losses of around a point or so were registered by American Gas & Electric, Electric Bond & Share, Distillers Corporation-Seagrams, Hiram Walker, Sherwin Williams, Swift Internacional, Aluminum Co. of America, Singer Manufacturing and Gulf Oil. Fractional losses were shown by Swift & Co., Standard Oil of Indiana, American Cyanamid B and Humble Oil.

Transfers approximated 12,000 shares, compared with 136,000 for last Friday.

U. S. Drive to Cut Interest Rates On Bonds Hits Private Lenders

By Anna P. Youngman.

Chairman Jones of the RFC is engaged in a campaign to "beat down" the investment rate of interest. In so doing he is following a policy indorsed and publicly urged by the President, despite the fact that the Administration's price-raising activities favor debtors at the expense of creditors, and therefore have a tendency to prevent interest rates from falling.

However, such inconsistencies are characteristic of New Deal methods and apparently do not disturb those in authority.

It seems to be taken for granted—although without warrant—that a lower investment rate of interest is socially desirable. Chairman Jones of the R. F. C. and the redoubtable Mayor LaGuardia, for example, who have recently been battling with the bankers to obtain reduced rates on loans to be floated for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and the City of New York, undoubtedly have the popular side of the argument in their debate with the bankers. The latter as contenders for higher rates are regarded as public enemies.

Interest and Theory.

According to orthodox economic theory, however, a low rate of interest is socially harmful if it discourages saving, while a high rate may be socially advantageous if it encourages capital accumulation. The competitively determined "right" rate is one which enables accumulation to proceed, without throttling new enterprises through the exaction of too high charges. In any country or at any given time, that rate may be relatively high or relatively low, depending upon the volume of savings, the National wealth, existing investment opportunities, &c.

However, many economists and more politicians are inclined today to regard interest rates as creations of credit policy which may be made higher or lower by deliberate action. Instead of asking what the investment rate of interest is, therefore, they decided what it ought to be and try to devise plans for making their decisions effective.

The present Administration is definitely committed to a low interest policy, first as a form of debt relief and secondly as a means of reviving investment demand and hastening business recovery. As a matter of fact, the first objective should not be confused with a program to bring about a lower general rate of interest, Government plans to refinance the outstanding mortgage indebtedness of hard-pressed farmers and home owners, for instance, by reducing interest charges and in some cases, scaling down the principal of debts, are quite compatible with the exaction of high rates on new loans. An emergency which may make it necessary to write off existing debts in whole or in part does not lead inevitably or logically to attempts to lower rates for future borrowers.

Prospective Borrowers' Outlook.

Nevertheless, Government lending on a large scale with the avowed intention of aiding hard-pressed debtors causes prospective borrowers who are solvent to become dissatisfied with the higher charges demanded by private lenders. In the second place, sales of refinancing bonds, and insured and governmentally guaranteed issues carrying relatively low rates of interest are hampered if private issues carrying much higher rates lure investors away. Consequently the Government campaign to lower general interest rates is to some extent a defensive measure—a logical outgrowth of debt relief policies.

Another positive reason for the pressure to reduce rates is, of course, the belief that the opportunities for profitable utilization of borrowed capital will be increased and a needed stimulus be applied to the heavy industries. Hence the reasons why Chairman Jones of the RFC seeks to "beat down" interest rates are fairly clear.

The monetary and credit policies that have been pursued have enabled the Government to borrow cheaply. Now it is attempting to make these low rates effective over a wider field by threatening to underbid private financing agencies, if they make terms with prospective borrowers that are officially considered to be "too high." The Government undoubtedly occupies a strong strategic position at the present time. It may not succeed in forcing down investment rates on private capital issues to the extent desired. If it fails, however, it can enlarge the scope of its own financing activities, and resort to undercutting of the bids of private financing agencies. The latter can not of course compete on equal terms, since relatively higher returns on private issues are required to attract investors, offset taxes, and cover various financing expenses for which the Government makes no adequate allowance.

Norfolk Potato Cargoes Will Be Curbed in 1934

Norfolk, Va., July 16 (AP).—Potato shipments from the Norfolk section next week will be held to 500 carloads, under the quota apportionment last night at a meeting of the proration committees, representing growers and shippers. The Eastern Shore of Virginia may ship 3,000 carloads and the Eastern Shore of Maryland 500 carloads, it was announced.

Fixing of the quotas followed approval of the potato marketing agreement by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace. The quotas will be revised from week to week, it was announced.

Wheat Values Sink on Report Of Supply Data

Market Declines Fraction; Corn Advances; Oats Close Mixed.

Chicago, July 16 (AP).—Confronted by an almost record-breaking big increase of the United States wheat visible supply the past week, wheat values averaged lower late today.

An extreme tumble of 2⅛ cents a bushel from the day's top prices for wheat was witnessed, but rallies were in progress at the last.

The week's enlargement raised the total stock of wheat at domestic terminals nearly 10,000,000 bushels, and hoisted the supply to within 30,000,000 bushels of the amount on hand a year ago.

Wheat Closes Nervous.

Wheat closed nervous at the same as Saturday's finish to ⅝ lower; corn, ¼ to 1 cent advanced; oats, ½ off to ⅛ up, and provisions unchanged to 5 cents decline.

An unsettling influence in the wheat markets was the fact that there had been a 5-day consecutive advance of prices, and that many traders were inclined to look for at least a temporary reaction.

Under such circumstances, moderate hedging pressure and a good deal of profit-taking on the part of recent buyers served as a constant drag on the market. Numerous friends of higher prices, however, took advantage of setbacks and were quick most of the time to provide support.

Position of Bears.

Bears in wheat emphasized that dispatches from spring crop territory in Canada were less alarming today than on Saturday. For example, advices from Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, said that from 50 miles north of Regina, crops were average to good northward, contrasting with the situation southward. On the other hand, wheat displayed notable rallying power at times because of strength shown by the corn market.

Fears of crop damage to corn owing to extreme heat and drought over important sections gave a pronounced upward trend to the corn market throughout the day. Oats were inclined to follow corn rather than wheat.

Provisions sagged late on account of profit-taking. Earlier, the dominant factor was word of liberal export purchasing of lard.

Paris Cuts Prices Of Wheat Below $2

Paris, July 16 (AP).—The price of wheat officially dropped below $2 a bushel today for the first time in more than a year in France.

A new fixed price of 108 francs per quintal ($1.95 a bushel) was published Saturday in the Official Journal. The new price is the result of a recent law increasing farm aid.

There was widespread complaint that the old price of 115 francs a quintal was not being observed.

The new price, effective July 16, according to the law will increase to 118 francs per quintal ($2.13) a year from now.

The lower price established today is in accordance with new and more strict regulations intended to prevent fraud and misunderstanding which had resulted in the wholesale closing of big flour mills throughout France.

Steel Operation Rate Rises to 30 Per Cent

Cleveland, July 16.—While steelworks operations in all districts recovered last week, to a national average of 30 per cent from 22 per cent in the week of July 4, the immediate market for steel remains greatly depressed, and the outlook is obscured by uncertainties as to how quickly consumers can absorb the abnormal stocks they accumulated in June, states the magazine Steel.

Steelmakers look chiefly to the automobile industry to supply the first and strongest propellant to overcome the midsummer inertia. July and August automobile production is expected to be seasonally strong, mainly because manufacturers plan to make in these months substantially all the cars they believe will be required for the remainder of the year.

This will enable them to get an early start in retooling in preparation for 1935 models, thereby averting the delay such as characterized the beginning of their 1934 models. Production last week increased to 65,000 cars, more than double the preceding week.

Structural Shape Awards.

Structural shape awards also rebounded sharply, to 33,135 tons, mainly due to action on several large Government projects, including 15,000 tons of piling for the Fort Peck, Mont., dam, and 3,900 tons for a bridge at Bettendorf, Iowa. The Ford Motor Co. placed 3,900 tons for a bridge at Bettendorf, Iowa. born, Mich.

Many large construction projects sponsored with Federal funds are nearing award. Steel-makers believe the Government will soon put more money into the capital goods industries, and that the railroads, aided by improvement in their earnings, will make further purchases.

The Seaboard Air Line is inquiring for 100 all-steel 70-ton phosphate cars, and the Mexican Railway Co. for 50 all-steel freight cars. Baltimore & Ohio has purchased air-conditioning equipment for 31 coaches. Some orders are anticipated shortly for oil refinery equipment, the oil industry's rapid technical progress making much of its equipment obsolete.

Third-Quarter Contracts.

Contracting for the third quarter is proceeding at an unusually slow rate. Practically the only incenitve consumers have in making commitments under the revised steel code is to assure delivery. Some steelmakers are pointing out, however, that while the code now prohibits them from advancing prices during a three-month period this applies only to base prices, and not to extras on which a large proportion of the business is placed.

On the other hand, competition again is creating a feeling of uncertainty in the industry. A weakening influence is the President's order permitting a reduction up to 15 per cent below code prices on Government work, and in some of steel specialties bids last week were 5 to 10 per cent under openmarket prices. The real test so far as finished steel is concerned is expected when the Government takes bids next month on approximately 40,000 tons for naval vessels.

Structural steel fabricators express confidence that approval of their code at Washington last week will have an immediate stabilizing effect in their industry. Large structural rivets have been reduced $2 a ton. While tin plate still resists the general sweep of price reductions, a tentative figure of $4 a ton has been agreed upon for a new tin-mill product, with a lighter coating of tin to compete with copper-coated plate for the manufacture of oil cans.

Pig Iron Sales Gain.

Complete tabulations on pig iron shipments from lake merchant furnaces show a gain of nearly 300 per cent for the first half this year compared with last year, but order books for the third quarter are barren. Three Southern stacks have been blown out. Iron ore receipts at lower lake ports this year, 6,418,945 tons, are the largest for the period in four years, but it is significant that five ore carriers have been laid up. Scrap prices, after steadying for several weeks, have turned down. Steel's iron and steel scrap composite off 8 cents to $10.29.

Steelworks operations last week increased 47 points to 93 per cent at Detroit; 6 to 61, New England; 4 to 22½, eastern Pennsylvania; 3 to 31, Chicago; 6 to 21, Pittsburgh; 2½ to 20, Birmingham; from zero to 21, Buffalo; 15 to 41, Cleveland; 6 to 30, Wheeling; and 15 to 30, Youngstown.

Steel's iron and steel price composite holds at $34.23 and the finished steel composite at $54.10.

New York, July 16 (AP).—The indicated rate of steel operations for this week, the American Iron & Steel Institute reported today, is 28.8 per cent compared with last week's indicated rate of 27.5 per cent and 56.1 per cent a month ago. The gain over the previous week was 1.3 points or 4.7 per cent.

Britain Says Profit-Sharing Is Decreasing

London, July 16 (U.P.).—Profit-sharing appears to be declining in Great Britain.

Of the 655 such schemes known to have been started at various times in the United Kingdom, the Ministry of Labor reports that more than half of them were extinct last year. About one-quarter of those abandoned disappeared either because the business was wound up, or because it passed into new hands with different ideas; the others were dropped, it is stated, either because they did not improve business, or for other reasons were unsatisfactory to the employers, or because the employes received increased wages or shorter hours in lieu of the annual share in the company's profits.

In 1919 and 1920, when profit-sharing was popular, 96 different schemes embracing 33,000 work people were started; last year not a single new scheme was launched, and five old ones were wound up.

British experience seems to show that banks and public utilities make the greatest success of profit-sharing, apparently because their income is less subject to violent fluctuations.

The biggest single scheme in Britain consists of seven banks with 14,700 employes; the average share of profit received by the employe in 1933 was $280, an increase of 16 per cent on the ordinary wages, or salary received. Public utility companies—gas, water and electricity—had 68 such schemes in effect covering 49,900 employes; the average share of profit amounts to over $45 an increase of 4.8 per cent on earnings.

Britain Pays High Sum To Aid Wheat Growers

London, July 16 (AP).—Further information on how the government's domestic wheat subsidy is working was furnished the House of Commons today when a government spokesman revealed payments aggregating about $22,500,000 were made from the wheat fund to 76,500 registered growers in the crop year ended July 31 last.

Advance payments made for the present crop year ending July 31 already amount to $20,500,000 and include nearly 84,000 growers, it was added. These payments are on account of the "deficiency" payments available to registered growers to bring their returns up to the guaranteed minimum.

Alibi Witness Bares Revelry At Death Trial

San Francisco, July 16 (AP).—While the courtroom buzzed with speculation over whether Millard Hockman would take the stand in his trial for the murder of Louise Jeppesen, Miss Blanche McKay, blond "alibi witness," was put through cross-examination today.

Miss McKay corroborated the story Hickman told police. He declared that on May 13, when the pretty Ogden (Utah) girl was being attacked and strangled in Golden Gate Park, he was in his own hotel rooms with Micc McKay.

"I found them in Mr. Hickman's room on Sunday morning," said Miss McKay.

"He said he was glad she had left them, because it would give him a good excuse to call her up, because he was sorry he had let her go hom by hralf aftr th party."

"Well, did her call her?" asked Prosecutor Peter J. Mullins.

"No. He started to, I think, but I believe somebody else called about that time, and he didn't get around to it."

Miss McKay repeated her testimony about the party in Hickman's hotel rooms, attended by Miss Jeppesen, herself and Tommy Dee, middgle-aged man about town. Miss McKay and Dee had left the other couple alone, she testified. Hickman later telephoned her at her hotel and asked her to "come back and have a drink with him."

"I thought it was a silly idea," she testified.

"Why did you go, then?"

"Well, was in a daze. I'd had too much to drink, you know."

When Mullins later asked whether she had "disrobed" in Hickman's apartment, she said:

"I don't know. I was in a daze."

Import Stocks Of Wine, Liquor Rise Steadily

Stocks of imported wines and liquors in customs bonded warehouses have increased steadily month by month since repeal. The import figures released Saturday by the office of the commissioner of customs of the Treasury Department show that stocks of distilled liquors in warehouses at the end of June were 125,915 proof gallons greater than at the end of the preceding month. The amount entering into consumption during the month of June, however, exceeded that of May by 13,184 proof gallons.

More than 4,500,000 gallons of distilled spirits remained in bonded warehouses, available for consumption, at the end of June, 1934, and more than 2,000,000 liquid gallons of wines were in bonded warehouses, available for consumption, at the same time.

Total imports of both distilled liquors and wines were the lowest during June than for any month since repeal. The June imports of distilled liquors were less than a third those of February of this year.

Berlin Speyer Unit Votes to Liquidate

New York Financial Firm Has No Partners in German House.

New York, July 16 (AP).—The financial firm of Speyer & Co. announced today that, according to cables received from Berlin, the German Speyer organization has decided to liquidate its business. The stockholders of the German Corporations consist almost entirely of members of the Speyer family. It was understood that while formal liquidation will begin October 1, next, the winding up of current business has been under way for some time.

The decision to liquidate the German companies, it was said, was due to family reasons. Since the death in 1933 of Eduard Beit von Speyer, the senior partner in Germany, there has been no member of the family who could succeed him in the active management of this banking business. The company was started more than 100 years ago.

Herbert Beit von Speyer, of Frankfort, nephew of James Speyer of the New York firm, still remains a partner in Speyer & Co. None of the New York partners of the firm of Speyer & Co., it was stated, is a member of the German firm.

The Idle Pluvius.

J. Pluvius, who runs the weather, beheld the scorching Middle West, beheld the farmers grouped together, to rend the hair and beat the breast; they gnashed their teeth, their whiskers bristled, they asked for service safe and sane, but Pluvius loafed round and whistled and wouldn't turn on any rain. The turnip vines were dried and shriveled, the baled hay withered on the trees, but Pluvius, he idly swiveled upon his chair in giddy ease. By turning on the tap marked "Rainy" he might have saved despairing folk, but Pluvius was never brainy, he looks on duty as a joke. His attitude was staid and steady, he didn't care how people swore; he thought when he was good and ready he'd spring some rain, and not before. He should have kept the water streaming, to moisten every plain and glade, but Pluvius was idly dreaming of other boners he had made. At last he saw that utter ruin was spread across the farming land and said, "I must be up and doin'—I'll send down rain to beat the band." And so at last he worked the stopper, the faucet he so long had spurned, cloudbursts, which were most improper, washed all away that was not burned. And Pluvius no doubt's believing that men admire so dumb a dub, whereas they're only mourning, grieving since they can't reach him with a club.
